Senate dairy proposal earns USDA's blessing

BY JAMES H. EVERHART

WASHINGTON — The Senate Agriculture Committee has drafted dairy legislation that the Reagan Administration is finding much easier to live with than a House-backed version it criticized strongly last week.

The dairy title the Committee has favored in its Farm Bill deliberations was originally introduced by Vermont Republican Patrick Leahy. It includes none of the provisions that the Administration finds so objectionable in the title adopted by the House Ag Committee.

Specifically, it does not authorize a diversion program, relying instead on pricing mechanisms to control milk surpluses.

John Oakes, a special assistant to USDA Secretary John Block, said the Senate proposal is "very close" to what the Administration wanted in a dairy title, and will be "much more acceptable" than the proposed House legislation.

He specifically noted that the plan did not include a dairy diversion program, a provision the Administration will not accept in any final legislation, he said.

Recognizing the wide disagreement between the House and Senate versions on both dairy and other Farm Bill topics, Oakes noted that the Administration will not accept an interim extension of the present farm legislation when the current law runs out.

An extension, he said, would send the wrong signals to Congress, and allow the legislators to think the administration would accept less radical change than it now seeks.

The Senate Committee's dairy title, which is listed as the main proposal for consideration by the committee, would:

• Set the support price at $11.60 a hundredweight when the bill goes into effect on Oct. 1.

• Authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to reduce support prices 50 cents a year, beginning Jan 1, 1987, if purchases are ex-

ITC gives mixed ruling on Canadian pork imports

BY JAMES H. EVERHART

WASHINGTON — The U.S. International Trade Commission Thursday formally imposed an import duty of $3.21 a hundredweight on live Canadian hogs brought into this country.

But in a surprising reversal of its preliminary findings, the body voted not to impose similar duties on pork products.

The decision, though still a victory for the U.S. pork industry, left industry spokesmen feeling more than a little nervous about the likely result.

"Certainly, we're disappointed," said Charles Harness, spokesman for the National Pork Producers Council. "We can't quite understand why the commission reversed itself and didn't affirm the preliminary finding it made last December."

Apparently, he said, the Commission is choosing to make a distinction between live hogs and pork products . . . one that may make sense now, but may some day return to haunt the industry.

Currently, Harness said, the overwhelming majority of the pork imported from Canada is in the form of live hogs, and "that's the real emotional issue."

But Canadian pork producers now may simply shift gears and process the pork first before shipping into this country — a practice that may, in effect, be encouraged by the ITC ruling.

The only obstacle that prevents Canadian processors from doing just that is the "obsolete" condition of their plants, compared to American facilities, says Harness. And labor rates are also comparatively high.

When asked if the ITC may simply be recognizing the reality that the Canadian pork industry cannot really compete in the processing of pork, Harness conceded the possibility but noted that the ruling still leaves open the chance of a later challenge to the nation's ailing pork industry.

The duties are designed to counteract the impact of production subsidies the Canadian government is paying its pork producers.

As a result of the government subsidy, Canadian exports — especially live hogs — to this country tripled in 1984, driving down prices in the ailing pork industry.

And though the action this week will not stem the flow overnight, it is expected to result in long-term improvements in prices.

The ruling concludes a process that began last November when the National Pork Producers Council made a formal complaint to the U.S. Commerce Department about the subsidies — and the resulting flood of Canadian pork imports.

After both a preliminary and final investigation, the Commerce Department sided with the NPPC, and imposed a preliminary duty. That action required Canadian exporters to post a bond, equal to the amount of the duty, on all pork brought into this country after April 2.

As a result of the ITC action today, all money collected from the preliminary duty will be paid into the U.S. Treasury.

The amount of the duty is $ 3.21 a hundredweight on live hogs and $4.03 a hundredweight on pork products.

At the time of its original complaint, NPPC quoted University of Missouri ag economist Glenn Grimes as saying the duties, if imposed this summer, would cut Canadian imports by 10 to 15 percent for the rest of 1985, and by as much as 30 to 50 percent thereafter.

Former Ag Secretaries offer Farm Bill views

WASHINGTON — Four former Secretaries of Agriculture have met with members of the Senate Agriculture Committee, and delivered to the committee their joint recommendations for the future direction of farm policy.

Those meeting with the committee were Dr. Orville Freeman, who served under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, Dr. Clifford Hardin, who served President Nixon, Dr. Earl Butz who served Presidents Nixon and Ford, and Bob Bergland who served President Jimmy Carter.

Senator Jesse Helms, Chairman of the Agriculture Committee, asked for former Secretaries during a previous visit to Capitol Hill to "put their heads together and come up with some recommendations for the Agriculture Committee on the elements that must be in the 1985 farm bill." Their statement was the response to that request, and Helms thanked them for their contribution to the farm bill process.

"The degree of consensus these distinguished Americans reached in their recommendations speaks to the importance and urgency of making significant modifications in farm policy," said Helms. "This bipartisan consensus is gratifying, because their recommendations follow precisely the direction toward which the Agriculture Committee is now moving in its farm bill markup.

"While the Committee has by no means concluded its work, it has clearly indicated, through a mixture of straw votes and tentative agreements, a substantial agreement with the recommendations made by the Agriculture Secretaries. This lends hope that we can produce the kind of farm bill that a large majority of Senators can support."

The statement issued by the former Secretaries of Agriculture follows:

Proper recognition of the internationalization of American agriculture during the past 15 years is the highest priority item that must be considered in the development of the 1985 Farm Bill

In order to serve farmers and the Nation well, the 1985 Farm Bill should expand farm markets, raise farm income, and stimulate growth in farm exports.

To do that, the 1985 Farm Bill must recognize that the economic health of farmers and agriculture depends heavily on strong and growing export markets.

Agriculture has changed tremendously in the last 15 years. Markets for American farmers have become international. Even now, we export half or more of our wheat and cotton, nearly half of our soybeans and rice, and one-fourth of our feed grains.

Live supplies were adequate to barely adequate. Weights continued light to heavy. Slaughter schedules were moderate. Undertone fully steady.

Today's L.T.L. asking prices were 1 cent higher on U.S. Grade A at 47-55 cents.

Estimated slaughter of broiler fryers in Delmarva (000).

Estimated 7/25 1,947,000; Actual 7/25 1,919,000; Actual 7/23 1,845,000; Average Weights 7/23 4.20; Average Weights 7/16 4.23.

Philadelphia Eggs

Thursday, July 25
Report supplied by USDA

Market Comment: Cartoned egg movement continued slow to only fair overall. Spotty retail promotional activity and demand from areas catering to the resort trade is stimulating additional call or product but volumes ordered are unsufficient to keep supplies of large and extra large from building in many quarters. Floor stocks of large and heavier weights are adequate or available. Mediums are unevenly distributed but adequate overall.

Prices to retailers: sales to volume buyers, consumer grades white eggs in cartons delivered store door:

A Extra Large .60½-.64; A Large .59½-.63; A Medium .49-.53.

Body Condition - Barn Meetings

Almost everyone is familiar with the "fat cow syndrome" and all the problems that can accompany it: - calving problems, milk fever, retained placentas, metritis, ketosis, displaced abomasum, and downer cow syndrome.

Most of these problems can be avoided if cows are fed balanced late-lactation and dry-cow rations and calve at an optimum body condition.

Recent research at Cornell University done by Dr. Brian Perkins, Dr. Dave Smith, and Dr. Charlie Sniffen indicates that body condition (degree of fattening) can influence a dairy cow's production, reproduction, and health.

The purpose of these barn meetings is to show dairymen how to monitor the body condition of their cows and to provide recommendations for optimum body condition scores at various stages of lactation.

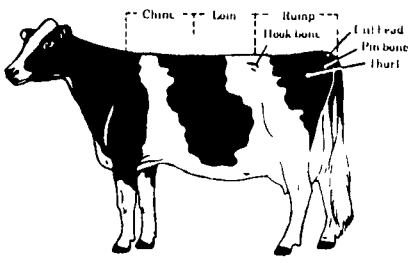

Figure 1. The areas of particular interest when body condition scoring a cow include the loin, backbone, hooks, pins, and the area between the hooks and pins

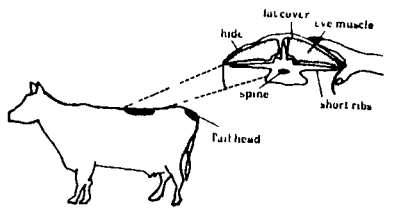

Figure 2. The amount of flesh covering the bony structures such as the loin region is estimated by palpation

To Make Summer Alfalfa Seeding

Late July and early August are good times to seed alfalfa, particularly in this part of the state. When seeded during the period of good soil moisture, the plants have time to become established before freezing weather arrives. Alfalfa is still one of our major forage crops and deserves the very best of planning and management. Band seeding is the best method to make this seeding.

Weed control is a "must" with a straight seeding without a nurse crop. Many stands are injured by poor weed control during the first year. Refer to the 1985-86 Agronomy Guide for assistance on weed control practices. Be aware that alfalfa should not be planted in ground that has been treated for corn weed control during the past year, especially fields sprayed with atrazine. Alfalfa is an excellent forage crop; however, it does require attention and good management.

To Evaluate Weed Control

By this time of year, any weed problems in your fields are fairly evident and probably beyond control. But now is a good time to develop an effective program for next year.

The easiest way to check for the effectiveness of different herbicides is to leave a small part of your field untreated. This gives you a chance to tell what weeds were controlled and the ones that were missed. However, if you didn't do this, you should be able to find spots where the sprays missed. There will usually be areas near the ends of the fields and will serve your purpose quite well.

If several types of weeds seemed to have escaped control, you could check the herbicide container label as to whether the material was designed to eliminate those weeds.

If your entire weed control program seemed to be ineffective, re-read the label to see if you followed instructions. Just a few simple mistakes during application can result in complete failure. Either too much or too little rain soon after application can often cause a great loss of effectiveness in many herbicides.

To Beware of Lightning Danger

Summer temperatures often bring severe thunder and lightning storms; we've had some in recent weeks, and no doubt there will be more to come. We urge parents to warn their youngsters of the danger of seeking shelter under a tree or swimming in a pond or creek before and during a storm. Safety in a truck, car or building should be encouraged as the storm approaches as well as during the storm. Stay away from electric fences and farm equipment that is out in the open.

Buildings with lightning rods should be checked to be sure the rods are grounded in moist soil and free of debris that would prevent the cable from taking the charge into the ground.

To Prepare The Silo

The corn crop is developing rapidly and soon it will be silo filling time. The condition of the silo should receive some attention before the new corn crop is ensiled. Many of the concrete silos may be pitted and have a rough inside surface. This will allow air pockets and cause moldy silage. Some inside joints may need to be repointed in order to keep out the air and have a smooth surface.

Don't wait until the silo filler is coming before you make these repairs.

Silage is one of the best and most economical feeds on our farms today; let's not spoil it after it is in the silo.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

'COSA NOSTRA"
July 28, 1985

Background Scripture: Jonah.
Devotional Reading: Jonah 3.

"Cosa Nostra," I'm told is an Italian term meaning approximately, "our thing." It is a term that is sometimes used by the Mafia to refer to their far-flung criminal enterprises. Obviously, it is a very exclusive term, for, if something is "our thing," then there are obviously others who are not included in the "our." Not only are "they" not part of "us," but we have no intentions of ever letting them become part of "us."

Actually, no matter how much we speak of this being "one world," many of us apparently prefer to keep the walls in place that currently divide us from one another. We arrange our lives, our homes, our communities, so that there is always some "they" and "us," and always some "thing" that is distinctively "ours" and not "theirs."

"I KNEW IT, IT KNEW IT!"

So, it is often with religion, too. That which is intended to unite the world, often ends up dividing it. Religion becomes just one more means whereby we separate ourselves from someone else. And the benefits of religion–salvation, the kingdom of God, heaven–these, all too often, we consciously or unconsciously, look upon as "our thing."

That's what the story of Jonah is all about (much, much more than it is a biblical "fish story"). When God called Jonah to go and preach repentance to the people of Nineveh, Jonah was so opposed that he tried to run away. He didn't want the job of preaching to the people of Nineveh. Why? Because he was afraid they just might respond to the offer of God's redemption. Jonah didn't want that because he didn't want them to become his brothers. Instead he wants them to remain his and God's enemies.

At last, however, God catches up with Jonah, and sends him on the long-delayed mission to Nineveh. When he does, the people of Nineveh, experience a change of heart and the "enemies" are transformed into fellow children of God, or brothers.

Now Jonah is really angry and when God questions him about this anger, Jonah replies that "I knew that thou art a gracious God and merciful, slow to anger, and abounding in steadfast love, and repentest of evil." (4:2)

BETTER TO DIE

Jonah's forthrightness here is disconcerting. He is so honest about his prejudices, that it is either refreshing or embarrassing or both. Plainly, he wants the love and favor of God to remain "our thing." He doesn't want to share it with the people of Nineveh.

When God made it clear that he alone would determine these things, Jonah sulked and decided it would be better to die than to have to share his cosa nostra.

But God makes it clear that it is never "our thing" that he offers, but his...and his alone.

PFA backs ag preserve bill

WARREN – The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) supports legislation to provide $50 million in state funding for the purchase of development rights to preserve valuable farmland.

PFA voiced its support in testimony before a field hearing of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee held in Warren, PA to consider House Bill 806.

PFA spokesman William Goodwin, and Erie County vegetable grower, told the committee, "This piece of legislation is of great importance to all Pennsylvanians. One has only to look at the most recent Federal Agricultural Census to see why. Between 1978 and 1982 Pennsylvania lost 663 farms and over 245,000 acres of farmland. This trend could lead to grave consequences for our state, considering what agriculture means to Pennsylvania as its number one industry." Goodwin noted that one in every five jobs in Pennsylvania is related to agriculture.

Under H.B. 806, one half of the state realty transfer tax would be earmarked for the purchase of development rights to farmland by counties. Farmers in designated agricultural areas would be eligible to sell their right to develop their land for non-agricultural purposes, thus preserving the land for farming.

Conservation school stresses respect for resources

BY JACK HUBLEY

LANCASTER — Any teacher can tell you that the best way to gain credibility in the teaching profession is to practice what you preach. Tim Breneisen, resource conservationist with the Lancaster County Conservation District is no exception.

Together with Warwick High School vo-ag instructor Sonia Shaner, Breneisen directs the Lancaster County Youth Conservation School, a week of conservation education conducted at the Northern Lancaster County Sportsmen's Club.

"We recycle all our glass and paper products, and we compost all our vegetable matter," says Breneisen. Students lead a spartan existence while attending the school, living in large wall tents on the club grounds.

But if the accommodations are modest, the quality of instruction is first-rate, notes Breneisen, pointing out that the school's 10 counselors provide a student-teacher ratio of better than three to one. The counselors are picked from past conservation school graduates who have shown leadership abilities. "We're fortunate that our senior counselors keep coming back year after year," says Breneisen. "They're really helping to make this program a success."

Sponsored by the Federated Sportsmen of Lancaster County and the County Conservation District, this year's school attracted 29 participants from throughout the county. About 80 percent of the normal year's enrollment are chosen by county sportsmen's clubs, with the remaining 20 percent coming from organizations such as County Conservancy and the Lancaster Environmental Action Federation. This year two students were sponsored by the Ephrata Area Young Farmers chapter.

The main purpose of the school is to instill an awareness of the need for resource conservation in its students, says Breneisen. Through contact with various conservation agencies throughout the week, students also learn about career opportunities in the conservation field.

Highlights of the week included a day of firearms instruction conducted by the county's three District Game Protectors, and field trips to the nearby Middle Creek Wildlife Management Area and the Lancaster County Park.

During their day at the county park, students gained hands-on experience by building a gabion water deflector in the park's Mill Creek. The emphasis placed on soil conservation at the park is particularly timely in light of the sedimentation problems in local waterways and the Chesapeake Bay, says Breneisen.

Climaxing the week of instruction is the school's Envir-Olympics. "Essentially it's a test of what went on all week," says Breneisen. Students are also required to keep a notebook on all activities. Notebooks are graded at the end of the week, and the student with the best notebook receives an award.

"Hopefully these kids are going to go back home and make a positive impact on the environment," concludes Breneisen. "And we also hope that their knowledge will be passed on to others."

To qualify for the school, students must be between the ages of 14 to 16. They must write a letter describing why they wish to attend, and must also secure one letter of reference from a teacher or other adult familiar with their capabilities.

Those interested in inquiring about next year's conservation school are encouraged to contact Tim Breneisen at the Lancaster County Conservation District office, phone: 299-5361.

District Game Protector Ed Gosnell instructs a young shooter at Lancaster County's Youth Conservation School.

Ephrata Area Young Farmers president David Zimmerman examines Carl Mohler's target. Looking on (with rifle) is Mike Peters. Both youths are from Ephrata.

Cornell prof honored

ITHACA, NY. — A Cornell University agricultural engineer who has developed a light trap that blocks out light while allowing ventilation fans to operate efficiently in poultry houses – a factor critical for egg production, especially in the hot summer months – has been honored by the American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE).

The device is used to control day length and light intensity which affect breeder egg production. Designed primarily for breeder egg production, the Cornell device has application in any animal environment system requiring light control.

Michael B. Timmons, an associate professor in the Department of Agricultural Engineering in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell, received a 1985 "ASAE Paper Award" for his scientific paper explaining the concept, the design, and the analysis of the system's operation. The paper was one of nine selected for awards from among 362 evaluated.

The Cornell device, a major boost to the nation's broiler industry, is saving an estimated $21 million annually in improved egg production and feed efficiency through effective light control and efficient ventilation in poultry houses, according to Timmons. The annual U.S. broiler production exceeds 4 billion birds, requiring a steady supply of hatching eggs the year around.

Published in the ASAE journal "Transactions" during 1984, Timmons' winning paper--"Pressure Drop and Light Transmittance Characteristics of Ventilation Light Traps"–was written jointly with G.R. Baughman, an agricultural engineer at North Carolina State University, where Timmons was an assistant professor of biological and agricultural engineering before joining Cornell in 1983.

Previously, Timmons won a similar award from ASAE. In addition, he won the "Engineering Concept of the Year Award" in 1984 from the North Carolina section of ASAE for his engineering concept for the light trap.

Timmons received the B.S. (1971) from Ohio State University, the M.S. (1972) from the University of Hawaii, and the Ph.D. (1979) from Cornell.

Harding reelected as AGCC director

DENVER, CO — Janet Harding of RD 4, in Brookville, was re-elected to the Board of Directors of the American Guernsey Cattle Club (AGCC) at the AGCC's annual meeting in Denver, Colorado. Since her election to the Board in 1980, she has served as chairman of the Youth/Promotion/Journal Committee.

Harding is currently employed by the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Service, Inc. Other involvements have included the presidency of the local school board, co-chairmanship of the Pennsylvania GBA youth committee, directorship of Guernsey Restaurants, Inc., chairmanship of her county's annual Ice Cream/Strawberry Festival and membership in the Dairy Shrine Club.

This past spring, she married Charles Ruslavage of Clarion. She was formerly married to the late C. Eugene Harding of Mapleview Farm.

Born in New York City, Harding moved with her family to Montclair, New Jersey. After graduating from Vassar College in 1951 and taking a dairy short course at Rutgers University, she began her career in the dairy industry. She started out working with the Dutchess County, New York Cooperative Extension Service.

For the next two years she worked with the New Jersey Guernsey Breeders' Association (GBA) to coordinate Guernsey and Golden Guernsey activities. From 1954 through 1958 Harding coordinated sales campaigns and promotions for Golden Guernsey, Inc.

With this election, Harding will begin her second five-year term on the AGCC Board of Directors.

500 take dip in Delaware River

EASTON — Nearly 500 people spent last Sunday dipping their derrieres in the Delaware River as part of the "Dairy-Ere in the Delaware," a tube float dairy promotion that benefitted the Easton Chapter of the Red Cross.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program was the major sponsor of the event and conducted two contests to tie milk and dairy products into the event. There was a milk carton raft contest and a "Big Cheese Contest" to see who had the best dairy decorated tube. Another contest required people to guess the number of eight-ounce glasses of milk a cow produces in a year.

Opening ceremonies were held at Eddyside Beach near Easton with Pennsylvania dairy princess Lynette Loper and Northampton County dairy princess Janet Poliskiewicz participating. Also taking part were the mayors of Easton, Allentown and Bethlehem. One mayor's inner tube was christened with a quart of milk at the start of the float.

The Northampton Dairy Promotion Committee served free milk to all floaters and provided a display of dairy cows on the grounds. Many dairy products, including white, chocolate and strawberry milk, yogurt, milkshakes, ice cream, and cheese and fruit baskets were also available.

Former USDA heads give Farm Bill views

for people. Market potential is where the people are. World population overseas is growing several times faster than U.S. population, and most of that foreign population is anxious to upgrade its diet.

On the other hand, the domestic U.S. market for food and fiber, as well as in other developed countries, is a mature market. The American domestic market is not likely to expand significantly beyond our U.S. population growth rate.

The productivity of American agriculture continues to increase much faster that the U.S. population. Farmers are producing the food and fiber for the American domestic market–which has nearly a one-third larger population than 25 years ago–with fewer acres than were harvested for that purpose in 1960.

By contrast, the number of U.S. crop acres devoted to producing for foreign markets has increased by three-fourths since 1960.

The 1985 Farm Bill, and American farm policies, should concentrate on expanding agricultural exports in a world that is becoming increasingly competitive. There is no viable alternative. Either U.S. exports will grow or U.S. farmers will have to reduce their production substantially in food grains, feed grains, oilseeds, and cotton. It would be suicidal to ask our farmers to pace their output to the slow growth of the U.S. market while trying to maintain today's modern farm structure, land investments and financing, and the agri-industries that serve American farmers.

If we develop a Farm Bill that helps farmers adjust to new growth and new opportunities, and helps farmers to be competitive in today's world markets, U.S. agriculture will prosper in the years ahead. If we do not alter or eliminate farm programs that are harmful and fruitless in today's market realities, and which will become even more out of step in the 5 to 10 years ahead, farmers will suffer, rural America and its institutions will suffer, and the Nation will be weakened.

1. Non-recourse loans as a safety net. Non-recourse loans have been a part of the U.S. agricultural policy for 50 years, and they have worked well if loan levels are set at or below market clearing levels.

Since 1981, unrealistically high loan rates for most major grain and fiber commodities, in combination with a strong dollar, have priced the U.S. out of world markets, stimulated production abroad, and resulted in a combination of very costly acreage reduction programs and burdensome stocks. We recommend that loan levels be set in such a manner that they will be below season average market prices except in unusual circumstances. In that way, the loan program will protect farmers against major short-term price declines, but not interfere with the longer-term, free working of the marketplace.

2. Authorize the continued use of target prices and deficiency payments. Supplementing farm income through deficiency payments on base acreage instead of price support loan programs has one distinct advantage–it permits commodities to move through normal marketing channels at market clearing prices. A year-to-year buildup of surpluses is less likely. Furthermore, competing countries are discouraged from expanding their production.

Some type of income protection is needed for a time to help farmers adjust. A target price program that gradually adjusts target levels will be less harmful to future export opportunities than a program of high non-recourse loans or a program of idled acres.

Since small commercial farmers [illegible] greatest financial stress, a dollar ceiling should be established on total payments per farm operator. Furthermore, we recommend that Congress not establish specific minimum target levels as was done in the 1981 Act, but establish appropriate guidelines--especially for the second, third, and fourth years. There is simply no way to predict well enough what will happen to suppliers and prices in international markets 3 or 4 years in advance.

3. Reduce need for acreage reduction programs through demand expansion. A primary thrust of U.S. agricultural policy should be to expand demand so that the need for acreage reduction programs, except those for fragile lands, is eliminated. While being used, acreage reduction programs should not be operated to keep prices above support levels.

Government programs that idle U.S. cropland for the purpose of reducing production and raising farm commodity price levels are exercises in futility. These programs fail because they are unilateral efforts by the U.S. to reduce world supplies and raise world prices. People in competing countries watch us closely, and they expand production in response to U.S. actions–thus the effort to raise prices fails. Furthermore, when competing countries expand production and set up increased trade outlets, those are not dislodged easily or quickly. The net result is a gradual erosion of the U.S. share of foreign markets.

4. Redesign the farmer-owned reserve. The Agricultural Act of 1977 required the creation of a farmer-owned reserve for wheat. The 1981 Act continued the program for wheat and also included corn.

Reserves of certain commodities in the hands of farmers should be maintained as a matter of Government policy only for security reasons and for the purpose of providing a reasonable degree of supply and price stability. The quantities should be modest and the maximum amounts should be specified. The stocks should not be obtained through attempts to support market prices. Guidelines for the release and use of reserve stocks should be clearly specified and made consistent with market oriented loan programs.

5. Integrate trade and development activities in a new program to expand exports. Since 1981, U.S. farmers have lost 35 percent of their West European market and 10 percent of their Japanese market. These markets will continue to be important, and we should make concerted efforts to establish international trading rules that will permit us to compete freely and fairly for those markets.

The U.S. will need to look in-

Bedford Holstein Club hosts successful sale

BY BETSY STITT
Staff Correspondent

BEDFORD — A fine representation of Holsteins with both milk production and type were offered at the Bedford County Holstein Club Sale, held July 18, at the Bedford County Fairgrounds.

Forty-one animals sold for an average of $1161 at the first-ever Bedford sale. Total receipts came to $46,570

Green-Lou Farms of Virginia bought the top-selling cow, Marbeth Angie Frances Valiant, for $3200 from consignor Owen E. Martin, of Hagerstown, Md. The April, 1983 heifer is bred to Leadfield Columbus-ET Dam of the quality pedigreed heifer is Kingstead RORAE Angie, with production records to 20,290 pounds milk and 819 of fat. She is scored Very Good at 88 points.

Fidelity Holsteins of Martinsburg, consigned the second high selling animal, Legacy Molly Chief Misty. Scored VG-87, Misty is a 6-year-old with a top record of 25,514 pounds of milk and 954 of fat.

The Misty cow is due in August to Arlinda Rotate. Clark Weyand of Bedford bought her for $2050.

Landsdown Bell Maretta was the third high selling animal. Byron Over, owner of Cove Crest Farms, Roaring Spring, bought this Carlin-M Ivanhoe Bell daughter for $1950. She is also due in August to Cal-Clark Board Chairman.

Paul and David Countryman of Berlin consigned the Maretta heifer.

Owen Martin, consigner of the top-selling animal, also offered the fourth high seller, a Bell daughter recently fresh with a heifer calf by AR-B Anticipation. Paul Ritchey Jr., of Roaring Spring, bought her for $1800.

Singing Brook Farms consigned the fifth high selling animal. This 4-year-old Lime-Hollow Admiral daughter is scored Good Plus at 81 and was sold to Grand View Farms for $1775.

Dairy Princess Shawnee Ann Yothers and buyer Clark Weyand stand with the second high selling cow.

Terry Green; Bedford County Dairy Princess Shawnee Ann Yothers; Meryl Woodring, buyer's representative; Terry Diehl; and Marty Brumbaugh at the halter, all admire the top selling animal from the Bedford County Holstein Club Sale. In the box are Art Kling, pedigrees, and Lyle Reed, auctioneer.

Penn State wins ice cream award

PORTLAND, ME — Pennsylvania State University has receivd an agricultural teaching award recognizing the ice cream production course taught by the school's department of food science.

A $7,000 grant accompanies the Award for Excellence in Agricultural Technology Instruction in the Northeast. By winning the regional competition, Penn State is eligible to compete for the national agricultural teaching award, which also carries a $7,000 grant.

Four regional awards and the national award are presented annually by the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture (NASDA) and R.J. Reynolds Industries, Inc. to honor outstanding agricultural teaching programs.

Dr. Philip G. Keeney, professor and head of the department of food science at Penn State, accepted the award during the annual meeting of the Northeast Association of State Departments of Agriculture (NEASDA) in Portland.

Penn State's ice cream production course, the oldest and largest of its kind, has been taught to food industry professionals for the past 65 years. Through a combination of classroom study and hands-on experience, students learn the basics of formulation, production, packaging, storage and distribution of ice cream and related products.

The $7,000 RJR/NASDA grant will be used to develop audiovisual materials for Penn State's on-campus and correspondence courses in ice cream production.

In 1984, Penn State's turfgrass management program earned regional and national RJR/NASDA awards in agricultural education.

Any accredited institution of higher learning or state technical school with an agricultural curriculum is eligible to apply for one of the regional awards. R.J. Reynolds Industries, a leading consumer goods company with a strong agricultural base, and NASDA have sponsored the teaching awards program for six years.

NASDA represents the commissioners, secretaries and directors of agriculture departments in 50 states and four U.S. territories.

Pennsylvania State University's ice cream technology program recently received a regional award for outstanding agricultural education. The award, which is sponsored by R.J. Reynolds Industries and the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture, was presented to Dr. Philip G. Keeney, head of the food science department (left) by Dr. Charles I. Beck, president of RJR Technical Co. (center). Also on hand was John Nikoloff of the Pennsylvania State Department of Agriculture.

Couples selected to plan 1986 co-op couples conference

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

DANVILLE — Forty-three young farm couples participated in a two-day conference at Danville this week sponsored by the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives. Designed to increase their knowledge of farmer cooperatives, the workshops offered insights into the responsibilities members have to their cooperatives

Four of the couples were selected to help plan next year's conference, based on their leadership and participation in conference activities

Selected were

• David and Barbara Kehr, 47 Fish and Game Road, Littlestown Dairy farmers, the Kehrs were sponsored by the Adams-Franklin-York Council of PAFC.

• Roy and Sue Crow, Kennedyville, Md. The Crows also operate a dairy farm and were sponsored by Inter-State Milk Producers.

• Brian and Janet Beckman, 8521 Lewis Road, Harbor Creek. Grape and tomato growers, the Beckmans were sponsored by the National Grape Cooperative.

• Daryl and Linda Heisey, R1, Rexville, NY. Dairy and veal farmers, the Heiseys were sponsored by Headwaters Farm Credit.

Another couple, Erick and Dixie Coolidge, R7, Wellsboro, served as one of four leaders couples for this year's conference, and will return to chair next year's conference. Frank and Virginia Graybill, R1, Hershey, will represent the couples by serving on the PAFC board of directors.

A popular portion of the annual conferene was a round table discussion featuring cooperative directors and management answering questions about the various kinds of cooperatives. In one group, the couples learned the route legislation takes before becoming enacted; and in another they got to ask specific questions about the operation of their cooperatives

Vo-ag teacher Fred Dillner, leading a discussion on cooperatives, told the couples they must begin thinking as member-user-owners of their cooperatives

Couples were interested in becoming more involved in their cooperatives, but pointed out that the time involved in being a director is sometimes at conflict with their need to make their farming operation a profitable one

Sessions were also devoted to increasing their leadership abilities and to understand themselves and others. In separate sessions, women and men had the opportunity to share the frustrations they have in common in farming operations, as well as the joys

These four couples attended the two-day conference and were chosen to return to plan and carry out the 1985 PAFC couple's conference. From left are David and Barbara Kehr, Littlestown; Daryl and Linda Heisey, Rexville, NY; Roy and Sue Crow, Kennedyville, Md.; and Brian and Janet Beckman, Harbor Creek.

Ag Secretary Grubb addresses PAFC Co-op Couples Conference

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

DANVILLE — Calling cooperatives "a very vital part of agriculture," Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Richard Grubb said he hopes to continue working with cooperatives in his new role. Grubb was speaking last week to the 43 young farm couples who attended the PAFC Couple's Conference in Danville.

After six weeks on the job, Grubb said he has found that within the Department the staff is committed to serving both the farm and the agri-business community. "We are here to promote and to serve Pennsylvania agriculture," Grubb declared.

In addition to meeting with ag groups, Grubb has spent his time getting to know other governmental agencies in the Capitol City.

Although he acknowledges that Pennsylvania farmers are under stress, Grubb says they are in better financial shape than their peers in other parts of the country because of their much lower debt to asset ratio. While there will be foreclosures in the Keystone state, Grubb says it will not be at the same rate as on a national level.

Immediate priorities for Grubb include looking at the whole livestock and poultry health picture "We have a tremendous investment and we need to enhance the industry with a proactive program to ensure that we have no more disastrous incidents," he said.

Another priority is farmland management and a third is the development of agriculture industries. He said Pennsylvania is a "natural site" for agriculture businesses to locate, and said he would like to see more farm market programs, including inner city markets.

Grubb said the agricultural community must be aware of the changing preferences of consumers and of how those changes influence agriculture.

Ward Cooper, general manager of Knouse Foods and PAFC president, encouraged the young couples to share the knowledge they have gained when they return home. "Share what you have acquired with your neighbors, with co-op councils and with your own cooperative. Management and boards don't have a monopoly on good ideas. If members share their ideas, it makes the whole business go better."

N. Alan Bair, director of member services and public relations for Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, also told the couples to accept the challenge of sharing their knowledge through cooperative programs at home. He reminded them, "Membership gives directors their direction."

Bair told the young couples that cooperatives are working together more now than ever before, something he called "a positive trend." He pointed out that cooperatives and PAFC are working for them in the areas of legislation and marketing.

Secretary of Agriculture Richard Grubb tells and audience of young farm couples that cooperatives "are a very vital part of agriculture."

CCC payments suspended

WASHINGTON — U.S. Department of Agriculture officials today announced temporary suspension of payments through Commodity Credit Corporation and Federal Crop Insurance Corporation programs.

Everett Rank, executive vice president of USDA's Commodity Credit Corporation, said payments for commodity credit programs were suspended because the corporation has nearly depleted its $25 billion borrowing authority.

The action temporarily halts payments for commodity loans, warehouse and producer storage, diversion programs and dairy price support purchases. The agency will continue to carry out all other program functions except check-writing for these programs.

The FCIC also has temporarily suspended payments for crop insurance claims.

According to Merritt Sprague, manager of FCIC, the action was necessary because claims resulting from last year's disastrous weather have exhausted available funds.

Sprague and Rank said suspended payments for CCC and FCIC claims will be paid as soon as possible after congressional enactment of the Fiscal Year 1985 Supplemental Appropriation Bill.

Len Lyn entries dominate Lancaster Holstein Show

BY WENDY WEHR

QUARRYVILLE — The Galen Crouse family of Len Lyn Farm, Stevens, earned a fistful of top awards at this year's Lancaster County Holstein Show, held Thursday at the Solanco Fairgrounds.

Outshowing some stiff competition, the Crouses exhibited the grand champion and the futurity winner, and finally walked away with the show's premier exhibitor banner.

Grand champion of the show was Muroc Apache Nicki, the Crouses' first-place aged cow entry. Sired by Chapel Bank Apache, she is out of Muroc Nick Ormsby.

Bred by William Murphy, Nicki was purchased by the Crouses four years ago. Scored an outstanding Ex-93, she is producing 22,000 pounds of milk and 1000 pounds of fat with a 5 percent test.

Galen Crouse and sons also captured the competitive futurity title with their Len Lyn Arlinda Lindsay-ET, an Arlinda Chief daughter out of Webotuk Matt Lilly. A $400 purse, created from the class' special entry fees, came with the futurity win.

And adding first and second place awards in the 3- and 4-year-old dry class to their winnings, the Crouse family also accumulated enough points to receive the show's premier exhibitor banner.

Nathan Stoltzfus of Gap earned the premier breeder award, thanks to top placings by his own entries and the entries of daughter and son-in-law Clifford and Joyce Blank, who showed several winning animals with Stoltzfus' Con Noll prefix.

Galen Crouse and sons accept the premier exhibitor award from Lancaster County dairy princess Janae Martin.

Stoltzfus claimed the premier breeder banner award last year, as well.

Paul Welk, of Peach Bottom, showed his first-place four-year-old to the reserve grand champion spot. Welk Crest Jemini Belinda, a Jemini daughter out of Welk Crest Gay Bev, also earned the treasured best-owned-and-bred title of the show.

Belinda, a 21,000 pound producer, stood as reserve in last year's Lancaster County show as well. On Thursday, judge Norman Hill noted that Tom McCauley's Queen Star Sexy stood a very close second to the Welk entry in the four-year-old class.

The first and second place senior yearlings earned the junior and reserve junior championships of the show. Sukavin Persuader Holly received the junior champion title at the hand of 4-H exhibitor Karen Kauffman, of Peach Bottom.

Fultonway Miranda's Miracle, bred and owned by Fultonway Farms, was named reserve junior champion.

Following are the results to three placings of Thursday's Lancaster County Holstein Show.

Seasoned Lancaster 4-H'ers return to winner's circle

BY WENDY WEHR

QUARRYVILLE — McCauley. Welk. Arrowsmith. Spickler. Garber. Trimble. Familiar names and familiar faces dominated the Lancaster County 4-H Dairy Show this week. A group of seasoned winners earned the Holstein and colored breed championships during the 4-H show, held Wednesday at the Solanco Fairgrounds.

Judge Dennis Wolff selected Tom McCauley's Queen Star Sexy as grand champion of the Holstein competition. Calling her an "easy winner," Wolff placed the four-year-old Sexation daughter over Matt Welk's senior two-year-old in the reserve champion position.

Bred by the Stardeede Syndicate, of Holcomb, N.Y., the Excellent-90 Sexy has given Tom many wins during previous show seasons, including grand championships in youth competition at this year's Farm Show and the Holstein State Spring Show. Tom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Alan McCauley, Elizabethtown.

Ten-year-old Matthew Welk showed Welk-Crest Locust Leann to the reserve championship. Sired by Locust-Glen Ivanhoe Elevation, Leann was bred by Matt's parents, Paul and Beverly Welk, of Peach Bottom.

Karen Kauffman, also of Peach Bottom, showed her senior yearling to the junior championship in the Holstein competition, while John Barley, Washington Boro, picked up the reserve junior championship with his senior calf.

Tom McCauley won handily with his Queen Star Sexy, the grand champion of the Lancaster 4-H Holstein show.

While Wolff, of Pen-Col Farms, Columbia County, judged the Holstein entries, Ginger Myers, Guernsey and Jersey breeder from Littlestown, evaluated the colored breed exhibits, naming several long-time winners as champions.

In Jersey competition, the Arrowsmith family of Peach Bottom swept the championships, except for the reserve junior championship, earned by Kyle Rottmund of Denver with his senior yearling.

Tom Arrowsmith, a 16-year-old 4-H'er and FFA student at Solanco High School, showed Hillacres Surville May to the senior and grand championships, while sister Sarah earned the reserve senior and grand champion titles with her Hillacres Fame Tee.

Both grand champions were bred by older brother Matthew Arrowsmith. Tom also picked up the junior Jersey champion rosette with his bred-and-owned intermediate yearling.

In the Ayrshire show, Angela Spickler of Mount Joy caught the judge's eye with her grand champion Masonic Homes M.A. Kate and her reserve grand winner, Johnny's Joni. "That will be a pair that will take some heavy-duty competition," remarked Myers about the 5-year-old Kate, and Joni, a senior calf.

Green Brae Princess Ann, shown by Michelle Kerdeman, of Manheim, took the reserve senior Ayrshire championship, and Fred Esbenshade of Quarryville exhibited his intermediate yearling for the reserve junior championship.

Cousins Janice Garber and Danean Charles earned the Guernsey grand championships with two Willows Farm senior two-

Cousins Danean Charles and Janice Garber exhibited these two Willows Farm Guernseys on Wednesday during Lancaster 4-H competition. Danean earned the grand championship and Janice stepped into the reserve champion spot.

Familiar pair take championships at York Holstein Show

BY JOYCE BUPP AND SUZANNE KEENE

YORK — C.E. Hubbard III of New Cumberland and his three-year-old Kowraygen Creek Linnan Jean, a familiar pair in show rings across the state, took the top honors at the York Holstein Show Thursday,

The winning duo garnered both the senior and grand championships in the open show, a repeat of last year's performance. The three-year-old Elevation daughter was bred by Hagan, McKown and Seidel. As a two-year-old, the Excellent 90 Jean had a production record of 20,157 pounds milk with 872 pounds fat and was named junior All-Pennsylvania.

Hubbard also took senior and grand champion laurels at the 4-H Roundup Wednesday.

Bridgette Boyer, another familiar York County 4-H'er, earned reserve senior champion and reserve grand champion with her three-year-old Sunnybend Sexy Glitter B Star, a Sexation daughter. This 81-point home-bred heifer produced 16,000 pounds as a two year old.

Bridgette also earned junior championship honors and best junior female bred and owned by exhibitor with Sunnybend Jan Columbus Kit, a full sister to the reserve grand champion.

The reserve junior champion, owned by Lesley King of Kingstead Farms, was a heifer calf sired by S-W-D Valiant.

Kingway Farm, Delta, was named premier breeder and Sunnybend Farm, owned by Tom and June Boyer, York, was named premier exhibitor.

Results of the show are as follows:

Bridgette Boyer, center, took junior champion in the York Holstein Show, while reserve honors went to Leslie King, second from left. On hand to congratulate them were York alternate dairy princess Kelly Kilgore, left, Loren Detta from Spangler and Sprenkle Feeds, right, and Bill Massa, of Atlantic Breeders.

It was the second championship year in a row for C.E. Hubbard III, second from right, who took the top spot in both the York 4-H Holstein show and the open show on Thursday. Reserve champion honors in both shows went to Bridgette Boyer. On hand for the awards were judge Bob Kauffman and York dairy princess Joyce Ruppert.

Hubbard, Boyer earn Holstein honors in York 4-H Roundup

Sue Eisenhart cropped both the grand and reserve placings in the York 4-H Roundup's Jersey breed show.

BY JOYCE BUPP AND SUZANNE KEENE

YORK — C.E. Hubbard III edged out stiff competition from Bridgette Boyer to earn the senior and grand championships in the Holstein division at the York County 4-H Roundup this week. Hubbard took the top honors with his three-year-old Elevation daughter, Kowraygan Creek Linnan Jean, which was also named grand champion in the open show Thursday.

At last year's show, Boyer had topped Hubbard for the top honors, but this year she had to settle for reserve placings. Boyer earned reserve honors in both the 4-H and open shows with a three-year-old Sexation daughter, Sunnybend Sexy Glitter B Star.

Junior championship in the Holstein division went to Lesley King, Delta, who showed a home-bred junior yearling out of Kingway Nuez Max. The junior reserve championship went to Patty Bupp of Seven Valleys, with her home-bred junior yearling Bupplynn Pete Starlight.

In the Brown Swiss division of the 4-H show, Lisa Kilgore took the senior and grand championships with four-year-old Airville Lisa, a home-bred cow sired by Lar-le Stretch Titan.

Kimberly McCleary followed close behind Kilgore to earn the reserve senior and reserve grand championships with her senior two-year-old Brookdale Telestar Nina, bred by Robert Sigler, Middletown.

Junior Brown Swiss champion was Steven Eisenhart, who showed a home-bred senior calf sired by Lar-Le Stretch Titan. Shelly Shaffer earned reserve junior champion with a senior yearling bred by Donald and Carol Trimble of Peach Bottom.

York dairy princess Joyce Ruppert awarded rosettes to the York 4-H Holstein junior championship winner Lesley King, right, and reserve junior winner Patty Bupp.

In the Guernsey show, Chad Rutter earned both senior and grand championships with a home-bred three-year-old. The reserve grand champion and reserve senior champion honors went to Annie M. Rauhauser and her five-year-old Anchor and Hope Truly, bred by Anchor and Hope Inc. of Maryland.

Jenelle Boyer, York, took the junior and reserve junior championships with two animals she bred herself. Sunnybend Shelly King Henry, a junior yearling out of Avalong Fayvor Sheba Shelby, earned the championship, while a junior calf sired by Maurana Wis Telestar claimed reserve junior honors.

Susan Eisenhart dominated the Jersey show, taking all but the junior championship, which went to Timothy Warner. Four-year-old Pine Mountain Fashionable Daisy won the senior and grand championships, while the reserve honors went to a home-bred senior two-year-old. Eisenhart's Sailor Debbie, a junior calf, earned the reserve junior championship.

The junior championship went to Top-O-Hill Justin Ginger, a senior calf sired by W.F. Generator Justin.

Champion fitters were Brad Walker, ages 8 to 11; Angie Lang, ages 12 to 14; and Lesley King, 15 to 19.

Showmanship honors went to Jacqueline Duncan, 8 to 11; Bridgette Boyer, 12 to 14; and Lesley King, 15 to 19.

year-old entries. Danean showed Willows Big Tex Daisy for a grand championship win, and Janice exhibited Willows Big Tex Velvet in the reserve spot. A two-time grand champion at the county 4-H show, Velvet has never stood second to the Daisy cow.

Jeffrey Balmer, of Lititz captured the junior championship with his junior Guernsey calf, and Janice Garber also had the reserve junior champion, Willows Fayette Toshya.

Competition was slim in the Brown Swiss show, with only two exhibitors. Scott Trimble, son of Don and Carol Trimble, Peach Bottom, collected the junior championship with his senior yearling. Steven Wagner, of Quarryville, showed his senior calf for the reserve junior ribbon.

Senate proposal

pected to exceed five billion pounds of milk a year.

• Require a $1.00 a hundredweight price reduction, if purchases are expected to exceed 10 billion pounds.

• Give the Secretary authority to increase support payments 50 cents a hundredweight, if surplus purchases drop to two billion pounds or less.

• Authorize the Secretary to modify support payments to accomodate changes in cost of production.

• Order the Secretary to complete a study of Class I differentials, giving special attention to changes in cost of transportation.

The adminstration just last week criticized the House Ag Committee's proposed dairy title, noting that it "was inconsistent with long-term solutions or long-range planning."

In a letter to House Ag Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, Undersecretary of Agriculture Richard Goldberg charged that proposed assessments in the bill would be much higher than the House group had estimated.

While the House committee estimated the assessments necessary to fund the standby diversion at 40 cents a hundredweight, USDA says the cost would be at least 75 cents, as much as $1.25, and, most likely, around $1.05.

The House Committee's dairy title, very similar to the National Milk Producers Federation "dairy unity" proposal, gives the Secretary authority to institute a diversion program if government purchases exceed five billion pounds equivalent, and would require a diversion plan if purchases reached seven billion pounds.

As with the 15-month diversion program that expired April 1, producers would be paid $10 a hundredweight to reduce their marketings, and would sign a two-year contract. The Secretary would also have the authority to accept bids at other payment rates under a 100-percent buyout plan.

Each year, the Secretary would be required to compute a preliminary support price, based on changes in cost of production compared to a base year. USDA would then be permitted to reduce that support figure 2.6 percent for every one billion pounds of milk surplus purchases over four billion. The maximum annual reduction would be 7.8 percent.

For the current marketing year, the formula would produce a support level of about $11.74 a hundredweight.

The House Committee's dairy title also establishes new differentials in 33 marketing orders, in an attempt to provide adequate supplies in the Southeast.

The Reagan Administration has objected to the House Committee's proposal, citing its reliance on "cost-of-production," rather than on marketing indicators. USDA's original draft of the Farm Bill called for sharp reductions in dairy price supports over the next few years, and attempted to make all pricing systems sensitive to marketplace realities.

Government purchases in 1984, when the diversion program was in effect, topped eight billion pounds. In 1983, surplus purchases reached 16 billion, while this year, Uncle Sam is expected to buy about 10 billion pounds.

creasingly toward the developing countries where three-fourths of the world's people live. In order for those countries to increase their purchases of U.S. farm products markedly, they will need assistance in economic and agricultural development. The evidence is clear that as these countries improve their own productivity, they supplement their diets with larger imports of U.S. farm products. As they enter the economic mainstream they become paying customers; as this happens, we should ensure that U.S. farmers share equitably in those markets.

Congress should expand and strengthen Public Law 480 (Food for Peace) with actions such as those in the 1984 recommendations of the President's Task Force on International Private Enterprise. We should enlarge GSM-301 funding and encourage greater use of "intermediate" credit for periods of 3 to 10 yers. We should re-examine all our export credit programs to see if they are adequate.

The Department of Agriculture and the Agency for International Development should be strengthened to augment their respective capabilities for export development and foreign assistance and to maximize cooperation and coordination between the two agencies.

The Executive Branch should follow aid policies that encourage long-term commitments to countries that pursue specific development strategies. We should also show greater flexibility in shifting U.S. assistance among countries, commodities, and the various export assistance programs.

Foreign market development programs conducted by commodity organzations in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture have proved successful over three decades. Those efforts should be expanded and new dimensions added.

We need to understand better the resources and requirements of our export customers. For example, a systematic study of buyer's needs and the way they utilize commodities might reveal product varieties and forms that could provide new markets for U.S. farmers.

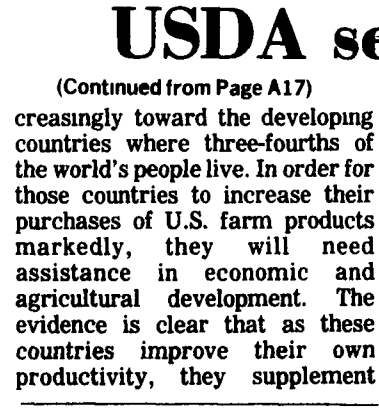
6. Expand U.S. research and extension programs that will help farmers reduce costs. Scientific and technological advances have contributed significantly to the efficiency of U.S. agriculture. The U.S. no longer has a virtual monopoly on the development of such new knowledge, however. The ability to generate new scientific knowledge and technology is gaining momentum in countries like Brazil, India, and Taiwan, as well as in more industialized countries. As farmers in other countries become more efficient, they will become stronger competitors in world markets.

7. Provide for a conservation program for fragile land. It is essential to our future generations that we address the erosion caused by intensive cultivation in certain identifiable fields. Nearly 100 million acres of land now in cultivation is eroding at more than the five-ton rate, a level nature cannot heal.

We strongly recommend a conservation reserve, perhaps on a bid basis, to remove this land from cultivation and put it back in grass and trees. The grass should be made available for livestock production only during periods of severe drought. The program ought to be tied specifically to fields, not to farms or regions.

A strong "sodbuster" concept should be included to prohibit farmers from receiving farm program payments on fragile land converted from grass and trees to cultivation.

Hybrex Hybrid Wheats are bringing home championship yields as high as 100 bushels per acre.



Twelve years of intense research have created a line of thoroughbreds unlike any other seed wheat in the world The technology is based on a chemical hybridizing agent designed to produce the most advanced wheat hybrids in the shortest possible time

The results? That extra hybrid vigor once available only in seed corn Increased tillering, which dramatically reduces seeding rates (up to 50% in some tests) Greater straw strength And added tolerance to ward off disease

Bred for the American wheat farmer of the 80's, Hybrex hybrids respond wholeheartedly to high management techniques

In a university trial in Maryland, a Hybrex hybrid easily outdistanced a field of 23 popular varietals with 127 bushels per acre

And we're currently conducting trials with customers in Pennsylvania and Maryland that are showing outstanding results. Like these farmers, with good crop management, you should significantly surpass your present varietal yield record, and boost profits substantially

New sire evaluation system reviewed

Lancaster hosts Simmental Summer Conference

BY JACK HUBLEY

LANCASTER — For the first time in its history, the American Simmental Association met in Pennsylvania, giving Eastern Simmental breeders the chance to convene with fellow breeders from around the country.

Highlighting the meeting, held at Lancaster's Host Inn on July 18 to 20, was a review of the ASA's new sire evaluation program. Drs. John Pollack and Dick Quaas of Cornell University were on hand to discuss the program developed by Cornell.

According to ASA executive vice president Earl Peterson, the new system is based on a procedure called Best Linear Unbiased Predictor, (BLUP) developed by Cornell's Dr. Carroll Henderson. Peterson explained that the same basic approach is used in the dairy industry to assess the breeding value of bulls.

Begun two years ago, the Cornell project has utilized 800,000 of ASA's two million available records. More than 11,000 bulls have been evaluated, and 5,000 will be included in the upcoming summary.

Addressing Simmental breeders on July 19, Dr. Pollock outlined the virtues of the new sire summary.

"In the past we used a bull's progeny to evaluate him against other bulls," said Pollock, "but this isn't the only relationship that can provide information." Accordingly, the new system incorporates data on a bull's sire and maternal grandsire. Using this sire information provides a more accurate assessment, especially on young bulls with little or no data on progeny, Pollack pointed out.

The use of these relationships also helps account for genetic trends within a population, Pollack said. "In a population that has a positive genetic trend, young bulls are penalized because their progeny are actually competing against better quality animals," Pollack pointed out. Using relationships insures that young sires are compared to older sires, yielding a more accurate indication of the younger animal's value.

Another advantage of the new system is its use of multiple traits. Here, two separate systems are used. In the first, birth and weaning weights are utilized with respect to both the direct effect and the maternal grandsire's effect. The bull's direct effect on post-weaning weight gain is also factored in.

In the second system, both the direct and maternal grandsire effect on first-calf calving ease, as well as second and later-calf calving ease, are taken into account.

A multiple trait system improves evaluation accuracy for a number of reasons, said Pollack. "We can evaluate the maternal performance of a bull's daughters before they go on to have their own calves,"he said. Also the system takes into account the possible biased selection of superior calves at weaning.

Another important characteristic of the new summary is its sensitivity to the genetic contribution of the bull's mate. "We now adjust, in part, for the quality of the cows that a bull is bred to," said Pollack. "This gives us a better picture of the bull's real value."

Due to be in breeders' hands by October 1, the new Sire Selector will provide expected progeny differences in seven traits: daughter's first calf calving ease, daughters weaning weight and milking ability, first calf calving ease from the sire's side, and birth, weaning and yearling weights.

"Over the last five to seven years, the beef industry has made tremendous strides in putting out a sire summary," concluded Dr. Pollack.

Pennsylvania Simmental Association vice president was equally enthusiastic about the new summary. "I think it's going to be a breakthrough in the industry for predicting quicker and with more accuracy what your animals will produce," he said. "We look at it the same way that the dairy farmer looks at his DHIA reports."

In addition to ASA's committee meetings, last week's three-day convention included tours of Lancaster County and an outdoor barbecue.

The American Simmental Association reports 10,500 active members throughout the U.S., seven Canadian provinces and 11 foreign countries.

Drs. John Pollack (pictured) and Dick Quaas of Cornell University were on hand at the ASA Convention to outline their newly developed sire evaluation system.

Lewistown farmer named to state nuke committee

HARRISBURG – James Aurand of Lewistown, chairman of the agriculture committee of the Pennsylvania State Grange, has been appointed by the State Conservation Commission to serve on the state's Public Advisory Committee on Low Level Radioactive Waste.

The committee was formed earlier this year to advise a cabinet level task force on the safe disposal of low level radioactive waste. Aurand was appointed to represent the state's farming industry on the 16-member committee, which includes local government, industry, medical and technical representatives.

Aurand has a background in chemical engineering coupled with more than 25 years' experience in production farming. Primarily a poultry farmer, he raises turkeys, beef cattle, cash grain and tomatoes on a 475-acre farm outside Lewistown. He received his B.S. degree in chemical engineering from Penn State University and worked for seven years as a chemical engineer in process and quality control and product development. He is now a full-time farmer.

Chairman of the Grange's agriculture committee since 1981, Aurand is also chairman of the state poultry committee, a member of the member services committee and master of the Fort Granville Grange. Active in many organizations, he represents the Grange in the Solid Waste Advisory Committee to the Department of Environmental Resources, is president of the Juniata-Mifflin-Centre Cooperative Council, director of the Central Pennsylvania Livestock Cooperative, and serves on many other agricultural and conservation related committees. Recently, he was named a director of the Lewistown Hospital.

Pennsylvania Ayrshire breeders meet at Homestead Acres

CONNOQUENESSING — Nearly 150 Ayrshire breeders and their families from Pennsylvania and North Carolina attended the annual Pennsylvania Ayrshire Breeders' Field Day on July 13 at Homestead Acres, Connoquenessing.

Hosting the event were Clinton and Evelyn Rader, and Harold and Barbara Rader and family, father and son partners in a 172-acre dairy operation consisting of more than 100 registered Ayrshires and Holsteins.

Mark Miller, vice president of Butler Farm Credit, served as master of ceremonies throughout the day and Harold Rader welcomed guests and gave a brief history of the farm.

Mercer County dairy agent David Dowler began the morning session with a heifer management and measuring program. His program highlighted good feeding procedures, grouping of young heifers according to age, proper shelter, and measuring and weighing heifers.

Dowler said the Extension dairy agents need Ayrshire heifers for the measuring program, so that accurate curves can be developed for national statistics. Ayrshire breeders interested in participating should contact their county agent or A.J. Heinrichs at Penn State for more information.

Dale Wack, Harmony, judged two classes of junior two-year-olds and a four-year-old class. He was also auctioneer for the youth's "Anything Goes Auction" held in the afternoon.

Winners in three divisions of dairy judging were:

•Ladies: 1. Annabel Keefer, Millersburg; 2. Jenny Cheek, Chapel Hill, N.C.

•Youth: 1. Steven Shetterly, Millersburg; 2. Donna Shetterly, Millersburg.

•Men: 1. Harold Kulp, Pottstown; 2. Keith Ruffaner, Worthington.

Junior scrapbook winners were named for the first time. Winners were Scott Palmer, Enon Valley; Kristie Kobosky, Cochranton; Amy Kline, Mars; and Melissa Edwards, West Grove.

The "Anything Goes Auction," which featured new and used items, netted the Ayrshire youth nearly $300 for their special activities and the 1986 national convention.

Butler County dairy princess Carolyn Scheiver and Pennsylvania dairy princess Lynette Loper shared their messages with guests.

President John Ocker conducted a short business meeting and awarded state milk production certificates. Twenty-four certificates were given, including six herd average awards and 18 awards for individual records. Receiving certificates for high herd averages were:

• Ardrossan Farms, Villanova; 19,367 pounds milk; 828 pounds butterfat and 683 pounds protein.

• Harold Shelly, Manheim; 14,554 pounds milk; 619 pounds fat and 495 pounds protein.

State dairy princess Lynette Loper assists Harold Rader with holding "Floppy" in the 4-year-old class.

• Heindel Farm, Womelsdorf; 14,551 pounds milk; 602 pounds fat and 487 pounds protein.

• Delaware Valley College, Doylestown; 14,451 pounds milk; 571 pounds fat and 499 pounds protein.

• Carl Rosiak, Nicholson; 14,219 pounds milk; 544 pounds fat and 478 pounds protein.

• Charles Gable, Elverson; 13,739 pounds milk; 597 pounds fat and 470 pounds protein.

Earl Keefer, Millersburg, chairman of the 1986 National Ayrshire Convention to be held at the Holiday Inn, Grantville, April 22-25, led the breeders in a discussion about the upcoming event.

Breeders interested in having their farm and name on a map to be distributed nationally should contact Keefer, Ann Young, West Grove or Charles Gable, Elverson, before Aug. 1.

Mifflinburg Farm Tour a success, despite low turnout

BY MARGIE FUSCO
Staff Correspondent

MIFFLINBURG — The disappointment showed in their faces. They'd worked hard for this day, and the turnout wasn't what they'd hoped.

Only two dozen people showed up for the Mifflinburg Young Farmers' first Town and Country Agricultural Caravan recently. Despite widely circulated posters, flyers, and news stories, attendance was low.

Perhaps the program was too new, too unfamiliar and needed even more publicity. Perhaps the mid-summer timing was bad. Or the fact that it was the first sunny weekend in a month. Or that the morning was foggy.

Whatever the reason, Dean Snook, one of the tour organizers, had to force his usually irrepressible grin. "I don't know if we'll want to try this again," he admitted.

Despite the small turnout, however, the Caravan was a triumph. Through careful planning and strong sponsorship, the young farmers had managed to put together an outstanding day of family fun for just $1 per person. Better still, the program was an admirable balance of entertainment and education that delighted those in attendance.

"You drive by these places every day," said Faith Brouse of New Berlin. "You wonder what they are. Now I know." Indeed, so so others who previously held only distant connections to farming. And introducing the public to agriculture was the motivation for the tour.

The idea developed from informal discussions among members of the League of Women Voters, the Union County commissioners, and the Union County Economic Development Council. Having done a similar program a few years ago for a state meeting in Mifflinburg, the local Young Farmers offered to stage their program again, this time for the public.

The Caravan began by dividing the people into two groups and sending them out on separate buses. Each group was to tour six locations, all within a ten-mile radius of Mifflinburg. The 12 sites included four dairy farms, one beef farm, one poultry and crop farm, an apiary, a feed mill, a lumber mill, a farm market, a farm supplier, and an egg processing plant. At each stop a host explained how he or she had gotten started, how the business grew, how the products are marketed, and some facts about the current market situation.

As the tour progressed, children found delight in meeting farm animals nose-to-nose and in playing with each other and those who lived on each farm. For the adults, the experience focused on education. The hosts and guides were eager to answer questions, and the group enjoyed joking about the smell of manure and whether the chicken preceded the egg. And underneath the fun, a powerful message was emerging.

By the end of the day, the message had been delivered 12 different and interesting ways. But it was clearly the same message: agribusiness is fighting for its life. In order to operate effectively, agribusinesses need capital. But farmers and other agricultural business people are caught in the squeeze between high interest rates for the money they borrow and declining market value of their products largely because of the influx of imports.

It wasn't long before people on the tour were beginning to draw parallels to the stories they'd heard about the auto and steel industries. Sure, auto and steelworkers were miles away. But here was the same story from their own neighbors.

Ironically, it was a visitor from thousands of miles away who best illustrated the crisis of the American farmer. Joe MacNamee, a sheep and beef farmer from Ireland who was in town visiting relatives, took the tour because he was interested in comparing farm operations. Talking about Irish farming, he mentioned the handsome price Irish beef brings when it sells to Third World countries and the healthy sales of Irish lambs on the French gourmet market. In contrast, beef farmer Ivan Yoder explained that the operation he

Western Pa. Tillage Field Day participants view reclaimed strip mine

BY BARBARA RADER
Staff Correspondent

SLIPPERY ROCK — Approximately 1,000 people attended the Western Pennsylvania Tillage Day in Slippery Rock July 17. The event, hosted by Richard J. and Blanche Kind of Grassycrest Farm, focused on an eight-acre plot of reclaimed cropland that had been strip mined a year and a half ago. The mine has since been backfilled with topsoil.

Tillage Day participants were able to view demonstrations on the newest seeding practices, fertilizers, artificial growing material, and cover soil. The reclamation site has special needs since the soil is not plowed.

By using a western Pennsylvania site, Extension and soil conservation specialists can study the variety of soils. It also gives local ag businessmen and farmers an opportunity to see the many methods applied to land in their area.

The specialists showed examples and comparisons in chemical fertilizer, mushroom compost, liquid manure, and cross seeding of 15 different forage species. They also demonstrated spraying paraquat and showed a plot section with artificial material used until the soil vegetation can replace it.

Participants were able to compare four types of materials for controlling erosion and water flow on steep slopes, including excelsior matting, netting, Mira Mat and Agri Fabric, all of which can easily be installed.

An explanation of how to apply these materials, where they are best used, and how much they cost was also provided.

Two methods — the grassy waterway and the rock-lined waterway — were shown to control the flow of surface water in the reclaimed site.

Other areas stressed during the field day included herbicide controls, soil tillage practices, and seeding and cropping methods, all of which could be observed during wagon tours of the demonstration sites.

Western Pennsylvania county Extension agents, Penn State Extension specialist and USDA soil conservationists began planning the 50-acre plot for the day-long event about two years ago.

Machinery dealers also gave demonstrations under the direction of the Agriculture Engineering Department of Penn State. Demonstrations included paraplowing, chisel plows, conservation disc, no-til drills and planters.

Some demonstration plots included small grains, corn, weed control in alfalfa, brassicas, rape, turnips, soybeans and "goof plots" showing the results of incorrect sprayer calibration.

Hosts Richard J. and Blanche Kind and their sons Dwight and Dean, operate a 480-acre dairy farm in Lawrence and Butler Counties. They milk 115 Holsteins with a rolling herd average of 17,200 pounds of milk and 650 pounds butterfat.

The Kinds have been using conservation practices on their farm since 1970 and have been using the no-till method with much success.

Astronaut daughter tops Jefferson

BY BETH NESBIT
Staff Correspondent

SYKESVILLE — The ninth annual Jefferson County Black and White Sale was held Saturday, July 20, at the Jefferson County Town and Country Fairgrounds.

A total of 28 bred heifers were consigned by 22 area Holstein breeders for an average sale price of $1133. In addition, three young Holstein calves were sold.

Greg and Trixie Kilmer of Towanda, Bradford County, were the top bidders of the day, purchasing Reitz-Haven Astronaut Prince.

By Paclamar Astronaut, Prince is out of Medalist Ned Connie. The heifer's maternal records include a classification score of VG-88, and a milking record of 16,820 pounds of 3.6 percent milk at seven years and four months.

Just fresh, Prince sold to the Kilmer's for $1900. Her heifer calf by Round Oak Rag Apple Elevation was also sold for $675. Prince was consigned by E. Bruce and A. Lee Reitz of Summerville.

Sale selection and management was conducted by the Jefferson County Holstein Club. Mark Glick of Reedsville served as auctioneer.

Trixie and Greg Kilmer (left) purchased the top selling heifer at the Jefferson County Black and White Sale from E. Bruce Reitz, consignor. Also pictured is Pam Smith, Jefferson County Dairy Princess.

Grange observes Ag Arena donations

UNIVERSITY PARK — The Pennsylvania State Grange formally recognized the local and county granges who contributed to the Ag Arena Fund for Penn State University in a ceremony recently in the Ag Aren· Building.

Nearly 500 grange members from throughout the state travelled in buses and carloads to Penn State University to see the Ag Arena Building and participate in a formal recognition ceremony.

Overall, the granges of Pennsylvania raised $50,325 to build the facility, the largest contribution from any non-profit organization. Many local chapters conducted special benefits to raise the funds. In recognition of this large gift, the University has agreed to name the Mezzanine section of the main seating area after the Grange.

State Master Charles Wismer presented Dr. Wayne Hinish, acting dean, College of Agriculture, with a check for $1,778, the last of four installments made to the college since 1982 when the Grange's fundraising campaign began.

At the celebration, Grange members toured the Ag Arena and the University campus before convening for a formal ceremony. Officials joining the Grange members for the recognition included Dr. Richard Grubb, acting secretary of agriculture, Obie Snider, chairman, board of trustees, Penn State and Lolly Long, vice president, Ag Student Council.

Entertainment was provided by Sassafras, a country musical group from Clearfield County and former State Grange talent winner.

Fitness billboards give milk high visibility

TOWSON, Md. – Summertime is synonymous with vacation-time in America, that special time of year when families and friends pack up the car and head for the mountains, the beaches, and amusement parks. Outdoor billboards become a powerful advertising force during summer.

To take advantage of this summer phenomenon, the Advertising Promotion Agency of the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Area (MAMMA) is placing billboards throughout the area. The billboards tout the "Milk. It's Fitness You Can Drink" slogan that is used in MAMMA's multi-media advertising campaign.

Two separate showings of billboards are being implemented by MAMMA this summer to reach motorists in the Mid-Atlantic. The first showing was placed during June and featured three action-oriented designs - an aerobic dancer, a racquetball player, and a bicyclist.

The second showing went up on billboards in mid-July and features MAMMA's milk spokesman, Cal Ripken and Mike Schmidt. Over 300 billboards picturing the two baseball players have been placed and will be reminding consumers to drink their milk through August. Ripken and Schmidt are shown swinging a bat with the slogan, "Milk. It's Fitness You Can Drink" coming off the end of the bat.

The billboards are designed to remind fitness-conscious consumers to drink milk at the time of year when competition from soft drinks is especially high.

MAMMA's summer billboards feature Baltimore Oriole Cal Ripken and Philadelphia Phillie Mike Schmidt. Over 300 billboards are now up throughout the Mid-Atlantic.

State milk production at record high

HARRISBURG – Pennsylvania milk production during June totaled 865 million pounds, six percent above last year's production and the highest June production on record, according to the Pennsylvania Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. The number of milk cows in the Commonwealth during June averaged 736,000 head, 16,000 more than a year ago. Milk production per cow averaged 1,175 pounds in June, up 45 pounds per cow from a year ago.

Grain and other concentrates fed to milk cows in the Commonwealth on July 1 averaged 15.0 pounds per head, up 0.3 pound from July 1, 1984. The value of grains and other concetrates fed to milk cows on July 1 averaged $7.90 per hundredweight, down $1.30 from last year.

U.S. milk production during June totaled 12.4 billion pounds, six percent more than June 1984 and the highest June production since 1947. Total milk cows in the United States averaged 11.0 million head during June, two percent more than June 1984. Production per cow averaged 1,128 pounds, 43 pounds more than a year earlier.

Grain and other concentrates fed to milk cows in the United States on July averaged 15.8 pounds, 0.9 pound above July 1, 1984. The value of grain and other concentrates fed to milk cows on July 1 averaged $7.43 per hundredweight, $1.03 below July 1, 1984.

Dairy outlook meetings set in Lancaster

LANCASTER – Dairymen are facing uncertain times. Milk prices at the farm gate are dropping, and may continue to drop even further as milk production continues to exceed demand, and as new farm bills and policies are being developed.

It is difficult for dairymen to make informed decisions and to plan for the future in the midst of these uncertainities.

The Lancaster County Extension Service is conducting a series of two educational meetings to provide dairymen with more facts about current issues affecting the dairy industry. Both meetings will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center. Anyone interested in the dairy situation is invited to attend.

The first meeting is scheduled for Tuesday evening, July 30th. The program will focus on the upcoming dairy referendum and on the status of the federal order system. Speakers will address the questions, "How Are Your Milk Promotion Dollars Being Spent?" and "What Am I Getting In Return?"

Representatives from the national, state and Federal Order 4 milk promotion programs will explain the main thrusts of their respective programs and respond to questions. A panel of producers, handlers and co-op representatives will discuss "How Much and What Kind of Promotion is Needed?"

The second meeting will be held Tuesday, August 6. Speakers will focus on "The Dairy Situation," "Dairy and Farm Bill Proposals - and Their Present Status," and "Dairy Outlook." A panel of dairymen and milk handlers will respond to the speakers under the general theme of the panel, "It's Our Future."

Speakers include: Joseph Westwater - National Dairy Board; Richard Shellenberger - Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Board; Daniel Martin - Mid-Atlantic Milk Marketing Board; James Sumner - Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture; Joseph Shine - Federal Order 4; Earl Fink - Pennsylvania Assoc. of Milk Dealers; Patricia Wolff - Pennsylvania Farmers Assoc.; James Fraher - Inter-State Milk Producers; William Stout - LeHigh Valley Farmers; Joseph Mathis - Eastern Milk Producers; John Collins - Dairymen,Inc.; Blair Smith and Jack Kirkland - Penn State; plus local dairymen - Daniel Fox, Reprsentative John Barley, John Howard and John Brubaker.

Inter-State names Hallowell director

SOUTHAMPTON – Bucks County dairymen Penrose Hallowell was named a director of Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative, President Robert B. McSparran announced at the Board's July meeting.

Hallowell, of Ottsville, was selected by Inter-State's board of directors to fill the unexpired term of District I Director Curtis Kratz. Kratz, who is no longer dairy farming, resigned from the Board this month. His term was to expire in November.

An Inter-State member for 34 years, Hallowell began dairy farming in 1951. He currently farms in partnership with his son, Jim, and Jim's wife, Nancy. They own 300 acres and milk 75 Holsteins.

Holding a bachelor's degree in agriculture economics from Penn State, Hallowell has served the agricultural community for many years. From 1969 to 1977, he was director of the Pa. Farmers' Home Administration. Most recently he held the post of state secretary of agriculture for six years.

Hallowell has served as president of both the NAtional Association of State Departments of Agriculture and the Eastern United States Food and Agriculture Export Council. He was co-chairman of the National Rural Development Committee, an appointment made by Secretary of Agriculture John Block.

A Penn State Trustee, Hallowell is a former president of the Bucks County Extension Service and the Bucks County Farmers' Association. He has been both a delegate and president of his Inter-State local and said he looks forward to serving as a director.

A firm believer in the marketing of agriculture products, Hallowell said he hopes to put his experiences to work for Inter-State. Farmers need to concentrate more on marketing their products, Hallowell said, and cooperatives like Inter-State are extremely important in achieving this goal.

Hallowell and his wife, Marion "Trish," are the parents of four children. In addition to Jim are Penrose Jr., Susan and Emily.

Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative represents about 3,000 dairy farm families in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. The cooperative marketed more than 2.49 billion pounds of milk in fiscal 1984.

Fleur de Lait to promote cheese usage to children

NEW HOLLAND, PA. – Fleur de Lait Foods, Ltd. is launching a special promotional program for kids called, "CHEESE IS FUN"!

This program will include a colorful sell sheet and tear-off pad with recipes especially designed to appeal to childrens' tastes.

Fleur de Lait's Creme de Neufchatel flavored cream cheeses are nutritious in sandwiches, with fruit and as quick snacks.

According to President Cliff Marquart, "We have found through extensive research that a high proportion of usage of our Creme de Neufchatels is by children. Cheese programs geared to childrens' usage are exciting, and kids find the wide variety of Neufchatel flavors fun and delicious. What better opportunity to build business for our products and the cheese cases than a "back to school" promotion-not a normal promotional theme for cheese products."

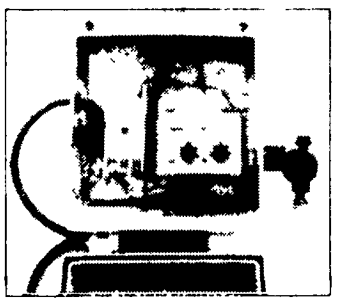
SWINE COOLER
DRIP SYSTEM

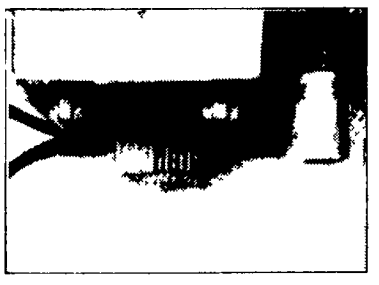
Look at These Features

Not all drip systems are alike! All control components of the Swine Cooler System are solid state and easily installed and/or removed for service

For example in many far rowing — gestation — breeding facilities operators frequently prefer to run their systems so long as excessive temperature continues



For these folks we build and price the basic Swine Cooler System with a solid state temperature controller only but with pre-wiring for a timer



Another plus of this system is the solid state temperature sensor Activated by resistor instead of the usual bi-metal disc, it is accurate within 1° and less subject to variation and break down

Mifflinburg Farm Tour

leases is facing an uncertain future. The low value of beef on the U.S. market and the high cost of feeding cattle may soon help the farm owners decide there are more profitable ways to use the land.

As they met first-hand with local farmers, the tour participants seemed to gain a new understanding of the impact of local agribusiness in their lives. It became not just a matter of a milk carton in a cooler or a jar of honey on the shelf. It became a visible person who worked to get that product into the store.

When dairy farmer Allen Wehr explained that he sells his milk to Weis Markets and he's glad to know it goes to local consumers, a man in the group nudged his wife. "We buy Weis milk, don't we?" he asked.

When the tour was nearly over, Seann Sauers of Mifflinburg noted that the Caravan helped to improve her understanding of agriculture. "My parents have a farm, just a small one," she said. "We kind of take it for granted. We never think that much about it." She nodded to her son and daughter, ages 9 and 7. "We signed up for the tour because we thought it would be fun. Now I know we'll be more knowledgeable the next time we visit Mom and Dad."

Harold Brouse of New Berlin wanted to take the trip for nostalgic reasons: he grew up on a farm. For him, the tour was an eye-opener. He shook his head as he viewed the technology that helps to milk cows, harvest crops, and process feed. "Farming's changed a lot in 50 years," he said. "Farmers can do so much more now...but it also costs a lot more today."

The group listened intently and asked questions as Dave Hackenberg explained that a Canadian farmer can produce and sell honey on the American market cheaper than he can bring a bottle of his own honey out of his plant. They listened, too, as Allen Wehr explained how he was able to capitalize his farm: "Back then it was pretty easy. Inflation gave you a hand. I wouldn't want to be a young farmer starting out today." When someone said young farmers today have to be better managers, Wehr added, "In today's market, even being a good manager might not be enough."

The visitors listened, too, to the informal talk. The talk of the Young Farmers families who helped fill out the buses, eager to take a look at each other's farms from a tourist's point of view. Farmers who exchanged information that a fellow in the next county had a load of spoiled corn he needed to sell. The visitors learned about the growing number of soy fields and the different methods of sowing and harvesting them. They found out the corn is high and the alfalfa cutting is in trouble, the blessings and damnations of the weather.

And as they listened, they learned.

Among themselves, the Young Farmers shook their heads. Dave Dietrich wondered aloud about the future of other programs to educate the public, such as the regional Agriculture in Education Task Force he serves on. "People need to know," he said. "And it's hard to tell how to reach them."

The tour ended in humid silence. The adults were worn; the children were sleepy. The tourists drove back to their homes. As the Young Farmers returned to theirs, probably too many of them were feeling defeated.

They shouldn't be. If this story doesn't have the strength of numbers behind it, it has the force of grassroots communication. The tour might not have reached hundreds; but in reaching for hundreds, the program might have failed. Instead it reached a handful, very powerfully. And from a handful of seeds, a new season begins.

PFA: preserving ag land is "a small investment"

PHOENIXVILLE — A spokesman for the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) testified today in support of legislation to provide funding for the preservation of farmland in Pennsylvania.

Harold Kulp of Pottstown, Chester County voiced PFA's support for House Bill 806 during a field hearing of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee at the Owen J. Roberts School.

H.B. 806 would establish a $50 million fund using revenue from the State Realty Transfer Tax. The money would be used by counties to buy the development rights to farmland in designated agricultural areas.

Once development rights are purchased by a county the farmer still has the right to live on his land, farm it, sell it, or even pass it on to his heirs, but he can no longer develop the land for non-agricultural uses or sell it to anyone else to develop.

Kulp, a member of PFA's Land Use Coordinating Committee said the 23,300-farm family member organization believes the Purchase of Development Rights (PDR) program is of great importance to all Pennsylvanians.

He explained that loss of farmland to development is a serious problem in Pennsylvania especially in the southeast. Between 1978 and 1982 census figures show Pennsylvania lost 663 farms and over 245,000 acres of farmland.

Kulp told the committee, "This loss is even more serious when we realize that research studies indicate that in Pennsylvania for every one acre of farmland converted from agriculture to development, three more acres have the potential to go out of agriculture due to conflicts with new non-farm neighbors."

Noting that PDR programs are already operating in Maryland, New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Massachusetts, Kulp urged the committee to report out the bill for General Assembly consideration.

H.B. 806 would amend the state's five-year-old Agricultural Area Security Law which allowed counties to designate ag districts to preserve farmland and gave them authority to purchase development rights, but provided no funding.

The bill would establish a state board to approve county programs and distribute funds for the purchase of development rights. The value would be determined by a process of appraisal and negotiation or by bidding. Kulp explained, "The value of develop rights on farmland is the difference between the market value of the property and its agricultural value."

He said the total cost of a PDR program in Pennsylvania would average about $4 per citizen per year, "...a small investment to save farmland in Pennsylvania."

Rural assistance

WASHINGTON – The U.S. Department of Agriculture announced today that its recently available catalogue of rural assistance can help rural leaders shape local solutions to rural community needs.

The Rural Resources Guide, prepared by the Office of Rural Development Policy (ORDP), puts information on 440 sources of private and public assistance at the fingertips of rural citizens.

"This guide is a valuable tool that local leadership can use to maximize regional resources in meeting local needs and challenges," stated the office's director Willard "Bill" Phillips Jr. "It can help guide rural communities toward futures which they themselves tailor."

The Rural Resources Guide is now available from the U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402 (stock number 001-019-00379). All orders should include a payment of $12.00.

Kitty Zackey is ready for fair season

BY BARBARA RADER
Staff Correspondent

RENFREW — July is one of the busiest months in the farmer's calendar. The men are busily baling the last load of hay or straw in anticipation of an evening at the county fair with their families.

And the women are hard at work in the kitchen, canning their best fruits and vegetables and baking goodies from time-honored recipes in anticipation of shiny blue ribbons.

For Kitty Rose Zackey of Lebanon, fair season is a fast-paced and exciting time. Each summer Kitty leaves her home in Lebanon and travels to Renfrew, where she stays with her mother. And during the months she spends here, Kitty will be busy until the last fair entry tag is propery attached and every item is entered in the right class, awaiting the judges' attentions.

This young mother of two daughters — Alexis, 2½, and Diana, 1, — has been going to the fair almost all her life, and this year is no exception. She is certified to teach French and English, but hasn't taught lately because she's busy raising her daughters.

Now that fair season has arrived, Kitty spends much of her time preparing her entries for the Butler County Fair, held this week, and for the Butler Farm Show, which opens Aug. 4. Later in the season she will enter items in the Lawrence County Fair.

Although she has reduced the number of entries since her children were born, she still finds time to enter quite a few homemade items.

This year she's entered one quilt, and numerous jars of fruits, vegetables, pickles, jams and jellies. Fresh vegetables, fruits, flowers and her favorite recipes of homemade fudge and baked goods are also out on top.

She makes her baked entries from family recipes she learned to prepare at an early age. An old fashioned ginger cookie made from her grandmother's favorite recipe is one of her favorite entries.

"Sometimes they win and sometimes not; it depends on the judge and the humidity," she notes. "I really make the cookie only about twice a year," she confessed. "Once at Christmas and the other for the fair."

Kitty is one step ahead of the other exhibitors as she ties her entry tags on all the canned goods she will enter in the Butler County Fair.

Kitty prepares her grandmother's old fashioned ginger cookies to enter in the Butler County Fair. She makes this cookie every year and has varying success at the fairs.

Nuts and raisins are the only decorations on the ginger cookies, "since that's how I remember my grandmother doing it," she adds. She says she doesn't make the cookie often because it is so time consuming, but she does make plenty of other varieties throughout the year.

Kitty also has her own red raspberry patches, blueberry bushes and grapes, which keep her busy making jars of jellies and jams that always top the canned goods competition at the fair.

Three acres are devoted to her two sets of fruit orchards. One is a young set of trees just getting started, but the other two acres are planted into a prosperous garden. The garden and dwelling are surrounded by flowers and her mother keeps bees.

Kitty's mother collects the honey using both modern and old fashioned techniques and entered the honey in the fair for the first time last year.

Kitty makes a special fruit pie using cherries, apples, peaches and pears from their orchard, but because the pie is displayed at the fair and doesn't get eaten, she considers it a waste to enter it.

Kitty names several reasons for putting so much effort into her fair entries. "I love the fair," she says. "The whole idea of anybody entering free, showing their handiwork, the fruits of their gardens, their animals, their crops. People are so excited to see a ribbon on their carefully prepared work. And the prize money adds up too," she adds.

"It gives a terrific feeling of satisfaction to be rewarded for something we do anyway, like canning vegetables or picking flowers," she continues. "It makes me feel like the gardening and pickling and sewing are being recognized as worthwhile activities."

Kitty's little helper, daughter Lexi, helps her cut out the ginger cookies. There's no better way for her to learn to make prize-winning cookies than from her mom!

Kitty often reaps rewards in the form of ribbons and prize money for her entries. She wins most often with her raspberry jam and jelly, bread and butter pickles and quilts.

Since moving to the Lebanon area, Kitty has entered a quilt for the past four years in the Pennsylvania Farm Show, taking a first, two seconds and a third place.

A Rosey Wedding quilt she made for her brother took first place in the 1983 Farm Show.

This year, she received a second place on a blue quilt she designed, combining the log cabin and stars. The quilt was later accepted at a National Quilt Show held in April at Paducah, Kty., and then was photographed for a "Quilt Art 1987 Calendar" to be published nationwide.

Kitty's older sister led the way for Kitty to start quilting eleven years ago. After reading many books and making some quilts she describes as "really ugly," Kitty got better at her craft. She now uses some of her quilts, but gives most of them away as gifts. She has sold a few over the years.

Kitty Zackey

"Six months is not unreasonable to make a quilt, but with two little girls, it may take me a couple months longer," she says.

Kitty has also taught quilting during the winter in Lebanon and also in the Butler area in the summer. While at the fair, she will be demonstrating quiltmaking in the free program tent.

She has made a total of 42 full-sized quilts since she began the craft. She has also won fair prizes with baby quilts, pieces, wall hangings, toys and clothes she has sewn.

Kitty says she would eventually like to become a judge, and would especially enjoy judging needlework. For several years she and her sister, Amy, have been judges' helpers in the home economics department.

"Someday I might make a quilt out of all my ribbons," smiles Kitty. Showing her handiwork and products she's made is very important to her.

She has missed only two fairs since her 4-H years — one while she was vacationing in Europe and the other when her sister Diana was born.

Kitty says the oddest thing she ever entered in a fair was a jar of sunflower seeds, which won her a blue ribbon.

"It's the spirit of the competition and remember, in some cases it doesn't cost anything to enter," she said. "The motivation to better yourself and to be rewarded for something that 's done basically everyday."

Local alumni attend National IFYE Conference

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. — More than a dozen Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Delaware residents attended the 1985 conference of the National International 4-H Youth Exchange Assoc., held last week on the campus of Lake Superior State College, in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

The International 4-H Youth Exchange, or IFYE, program was developed in 1948 by the National 4-H Council, in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Cooperative Extension Service. During the past 37 years, more than 3,000 young people from across the United States have lived and worked with host families in more than 100 countries around the world.

The IFYE program is a people-to-people program that also brings in representatives from other countries to live and work with host families in the United States. The goal of the program is to stress international peace and understanding among peoples of all nations.

The National IFYE Association meets annually in support of the program and to explore new ways to achieve the goals of international peace and understanding through the exchange of ideas.

The 1985 conference was hosted by the Michigan IFYE Association and focused on the theme "Building Bridges, Past, Present, and Future." During the conference, the group sponsored a service project to raise money for a participant in the International Youth Development Project. Conferees also explored numerous international topics during the week-long event and examined local points of interest.

IFYE alumni and friends from Pennsylvania who attended the conference included: Willard Fisher, Naomi Gehret, Benjamin Miller, and Jeff and Kerry Wallace, all of Oley; Dale and Mae Hostetter, Hamburg; Jo Ann and Dolly Jo Stine, Middletown; Gary Thomas, Bedminster; Davida Waters, Pottstown; and Wendy Wehr, Manheim.

Maryland and Delaware conferees included: John Schmidt, Monkton, Md.; Beth Leber, Reisterstown, Md.; and A.K. and Helga Kissell, Newark, Del.

More than 250 IFYE alumni, friends and current IFYE exchangees attended the conference.

New York will choose a new dairy princess Aug. 2

CORTLAND — On Friday evening, Aug. 2, New York's 40 county dairy princesses will compete for the title of 1985-86 New York State Dairy Princess. The pageant will take place at the State University of New York at Cortland.

The dairy princess program is now running in its 23rd year. In order to qualify for the title of dairy princess, a contestant must be the daughter of a dairy farmer or work part time on a dairy farm. The New York state dairy princess serves as a spokesperson for the industry, making appearances across the state before a variety of consumer groups.

The pageant is preceded by two days of active competition. All contestants must present a five-minute speech and are personally interviewed by pageant judges. Speaking ability, poise and knowledge of the dairy industry are key skills in competing for the title. All contestants have won pageants at their local county level in order to participate in the state pageant.

The pageant will begin at 6 p.m. with a reception and banquet. All 40 county dairy princesses will be introduced and from this group, ten finalists will be selected. The new state princess and two alternates will then be crowned.

Sen. Steve Riford, representing the 50th District of NYS, will be the guest speaker for the evening. He will discuss the dairy princess' role in the future of New York State farming. The 1984 New York State dairy princess, Holly Smith, from Onondaga County, will be honored and will present a farewell speech

The New York State Dairy Princess program is run by the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council in order to promote milk and milk products throughout the state.

Goals.

Everyone's into setting goals these days. Governments spend millions on five-year plans. Organizations appoint long-range planning committees crossed with short-term evaluation committees. Even kids have to start thinking about college before they're veterans of the first year of junior high.

Farmers, likewise, are urged to set goals, in spite of the total impossibility of predicting long-range weather, government intervention tactics, interest rates or the international export-import situation. While a "game-plan" is nonetheless a worthwhile idea, the aforementioned often render such long-range goals a type of pot-shot planning.

I had a Goal.

But they laughed at me.

Inspiration–or motivation–for this Goal dawned last summer, with a porch literally buried beneath bulging baskets of red-ripe tomatoes, bushels of beans, and such an outbreak of zucchini that even the hogs' appetites were squashed with the volume.

The Goal grew clearer as nutgrass nested in the gladiolus row, little black bugs built a sprawling urban development on the eggplant, and the towering pigweed and lambsquarters began to resemble six-foot Christmas trees.

I announced my Goal: "Next year, I'm cutting the garden in half."

"Sure, Mom. You say that every year," came one sarcastic sigh.

"Yeah, I heard that before," echoed another.

And yet another merely rolled his eyes and walked out of the discussion.

"Well, I'll show 'em," I muttered to the cat.

Initial withdrawal symptoms began hot on the heels of the holidays, when seed catalogs stuffed the mailbox on a daily basis. Remembering diet-type psychology, of occasionally rewarding oneself with a forbidden treat, I did indulge in a small, delicious seed catalog order or two.

As late April's soft, warming soil beckoned, I renewed my vow to bite the backyard bullet and keep to the lean game plan of the Goal.

"Don't plow up the whole garden or I'll let the back half of it grow up in weeds," I threatened.

When the planted rows began to show green, and stopped midway in what had once been the garden's length, someone finally began to take the Goal seriously. And planted sweet corn in what had once, annually, turned into a weed researcher's paradise on earth.

What a relief this leaner "acreage" of a mere 3,000 square feet is compared to the old fencerow-to fencerow patch. None of that stuff no one really likes but I planted because there was room. Out went the red beets and the groans that came with their mere mention. Out went the eggplant.

And in, instead, went dahlias, asters, bachelor buttons–none of which has to be sliced, diced, iced, canned or frozen. Excess of these are much easier to pawn off on friends and neighbors than a peck of peppers or wheelbarrow load of beachball-sized cabbages.

Efficiency has been a side benefit. That means get the aging onions out so late cabbage can go in. And somewhere find room for the bumper crop of late cauliflower plants that sprouted from every seed, and the three volunteer sweet potatoes that waved at me one day from a rooting pot in the greenhouse.

So on to the next Goal: next year I plan to grow only wanted plants–no weeds whatsoever.

I'm not going to tell anyone that Goal, though.

I don't think I could stand the epidemic of snickering it would bring.

Try fresh pie for dessert

The harvest of summer's bounty has already begun with fresh fruits and berries available in abundance. Many of these tasty, fresh products make a delicious pie, so now is the time to get to work in the kitchen.

And while fresh fruit pies are the choice of the season, there are plenty of other refreshing pies that make great summer desserts. Below are a few ideas to get you started.

NECTARINE SHORTCAKE PIE

Into large greased pie plate slice five unpeeled nectarines. Mix together:
⅓ cup sugar
2½ tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon cinnamon

Pour over nectarines and stir slightly. Let set while making pastry.

Pastry:
1 cup flour
1½ teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
Dash of nutmeg

Cut in ⅓ cup shortening and sprinkle with ¼ cup cold milk. Shape into ball and flatten to fit top of pie plate. Put crust on top of nectarines, tucking edges under. Sprinkle with some sugar. Cut slits in top. Bake for 20 minutes at 400°F. Serve warm or cold with cream. Makes 6 servings.

Note: I usually flatten the crust out on wax paper — no counter to clean! This is a fast and easy recipe, and, because you don't peel the nectarines, the skin adds a lovely color to the pie.

RHUBARB PIE

cup sugar
tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon ginger

Mix sugar, flour and ginger and add to the beten eggs. Put rhubarb in unbaked 9-inch pie shell and pour this mixture over it. Bake one hour at 400°F.

PINEAPPLE LEMON YOGURT PIE

1¾ cups graham cracker crumbs
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon, divided
½ cup butter
1 20-ounce can crushed pineapple in unsweetened pineapple juice
1 6-ounce can unsweeteed pineapple juice
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
2 cups low-fat lemon yogurt
2 egg whites
2 tablespoons sugar

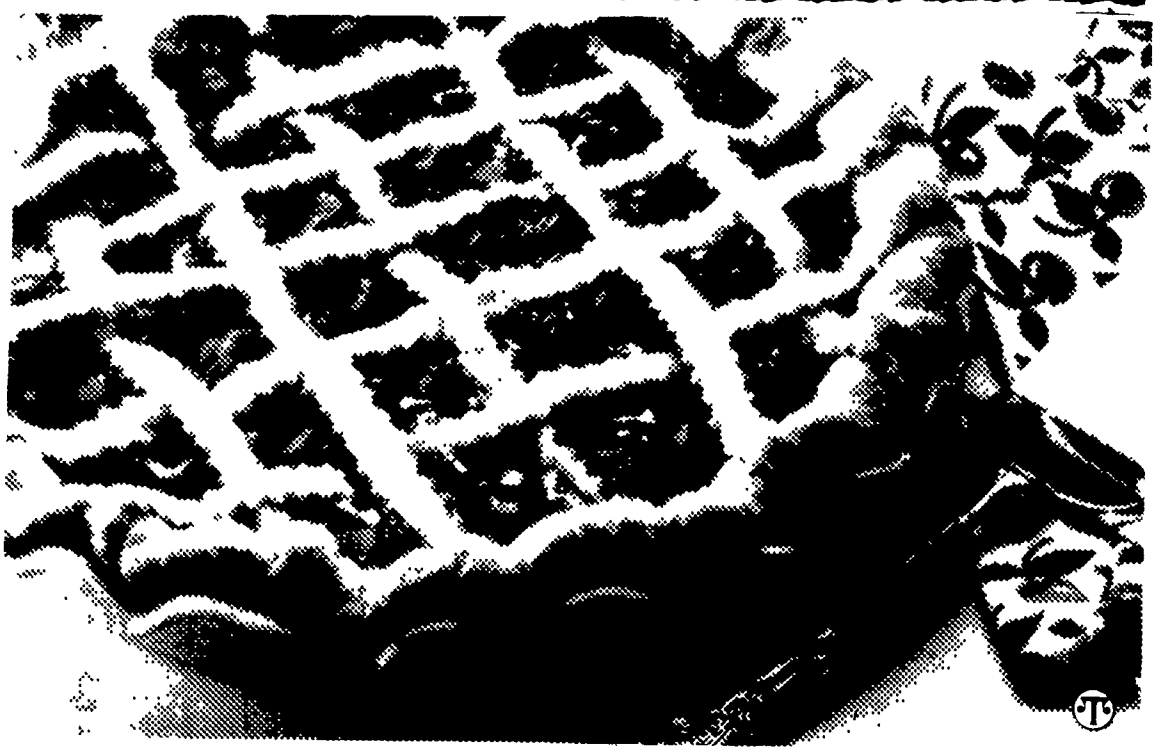
In a medium bowl, combine crumbs, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon and butter. Blend well with fork. Press crumb mixture firmly into a 9-inch pie plate to form a crust. Bake in a 375°F. oven 8 minutes; cool. Drain juice from pineapple into medium saucepan; reserve pineapple. Add canned pineapple juice; sprinkle with gelatin. Let stand 1 minute. Heat, stirring constantly, until gelatin is completely dissolved, about 2 minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in yogurt and remaining ¼ teaspoon cinnamon. Chill until mixture thickens slightly. Beat egg whites until foamy; gradually beat in sugar until stiff but not dry. Fold whites and pineapple into yogurt mixture. Spoon mixture into prepared pie shell. Chill about 3 hours or until firm. Garnish with lemon and lime slices, if desired.

PEANUT BUTTER AND JELLY PIE

1½ cups chocolate wafer crumbs
¼ cup butter, melted
1 7-ounce jar marshmallow creme
¼ cup milk
¼ chunk style peanut butter
1 8-ounce container whipped topping with real cream, thawed
½ cup grape jelly
1 tablespoon chopped peanuts

Combine crumbs and butter; press onto bottom and sides of 9-inch pie plate. Chill.

Combine marshmallow creme and milk, mixing with electric mixer or wire whisk until well blended. Add peanut butter; mix well. Fold in whipped topping. Spread jelly on bottom of crust. Pour marshmallow creme mixture over jelly; sprinkle with peanuts. Freeze until firm.



Bake your family a juicy cherry pie for dessert tonight.

LEMON MERINGUE PIE

1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1½ cups cold water
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
Grated rind of 1 lemon
¼ cup lemon juice
1 tablespoon margarine
1 9-inch baked pastry shell
3 egg whites
⅓ cup sugar

In 2-quart saucepan, stir together 1 cup sugar and cornstarch. Gradually stir in water until smooth. Stir in egg yolks. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over medium heat and boil 1 minute. Remove from heat. Stir in lemon rind, lemon juice and margarine. Cool slightly (no longer than 1 hour). Turn into pastry shell.

In small bowl with mixer at high speed, beat egg whites until foamy. Add ⅓ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, beating well after each addition. Continue beating until stiff peaks form. Spread some meringue around edge of filling, first touching crust all around, then fill in center. Bake in 350°F. oven 15 to 20 minutes. Cool at room temperature away from drafts. Makes 8 servings.

FRESH CRUMB PEACH PIE

2 cups diced fresh peaches
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour or 1 scant tablespoon cornstarch
1 egg

Dice 2 cups fresh peaches, add sugar and flour, Add well beaten egg. Bake in one shell crust in a 9-inch pan at 415°F. for 15 minutes, then reduce temperature to 350°F. for 35 to 40 minutes.

Before baking, top peach pie with crumb mixture:

Topping:
½ cup flour
¼ cup sugar
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Mix well.

PEACH AND CREAM CHEESE PIE

½ teaspoon salt
1 4-ounce package vanilla pudding (not instant)
1 egg
½ cup milk
1 can peach halves
1 8-ounce package cream cheese
½ cup sugar
3 tablespoons peach juice
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Mix the flour, baking powder, salt, vanilla pudding, egg and milk together. Pour into a greased 9-inch cake pan or 10-inch pie pan. Place on top 1 layer of drained peach halves. Next mix the cream cheese, sugar and peach juice. Spread over peaches about one inch away from edge of pan. Mix the sugar and cinnamon and sprinkle on top. Bake at 350°F. for 30 to 35 minutes. Makes 1 pie.

FROZEN BANANA SPLIT PIE

1 12-ounce container whipped topping with real cream, thawed
1 quart strawberry ice cream, softened
1 8¼-ounce can crushed pineapple, drained
¼ cup chocolate topping
2 bananas, sliced
½ cup chopped nuts
10 maraschino cherries, well-drained

Spoon 3 cups whipped topping into 9-inch pie plate. With back of spoon, spead and shape into a shell; freeze until firm.

Spread crust with one-third of ice cream; top with pineapple. Spread another one-third of ice cream over pineapple; top with chocolate topping. Spread remaining ice cream over chocolate; freeze several hours or overnight. Before serving, top with bananas; spread with remaining whipped topping. Sprinkle with nuts and top with cherries. Makes 10 servings.

CHERRY PIE

2 1-pound cans pitted sour red cherries, packed in water
¾ cup sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
Double crust pastry

Drain cherries; reserve ⅓ cup liquid. In large bowl, stir together sugar and cornstarch. Gradually stir in reserved liquid until smooth. Add cherries; toss to coat well. Line 9-inch pie plate with ½ pastry rolled to 1/8-inch thickness, allowing 1-inch overhang. Spoon cherry mixture into pie plate. Roll remaining pastry into 12-inch circle. With pastry wheel or knife, cut into 10 (½-inch) strips. Place 5 of the strips over filling. Weave lattice crust with remaining strips by folding back alternate strips as each cross strip is added. Fold trimmed edge of lower crust over ends of strips; seal and flute. Bake in 425°F. oven 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 350°F. and bake 45 minutes longer or until crust is golden and filling is bubbly. Makes 1 9-inch pie.

ANSWER - Mrs. Otto Schultz, Robesonia, requested a recipe for chocolate mousse pie. Although Kathryn Hoover, Denver, said she doesn't have a recipe for chocolate mousse pie, she does have one for chocolate mousse that she would like to share.

Chocolate Mousse

1 teaspoon unflavored gelatin
1½ squares unsweetened chocolate
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ cup milk
½ cup confectioner's sugar
1 cup whipping cream

Soak gelatin in milk in top of double boiler for 5 minutes. Add chocolate and sugar and set top of double boiler over boiling water. Heat until chocolate is melted and continue cooking, stirring constantly until smooth. Add vanilla. Chill, stirring frequently. Fold in 1 cup stiffly beaten whipped cream. Pour into freezing tray or mold and freeze.

Note: Remove from freezer 10 minutes before serving. If desired, top with additional whipped cream. Makes 4 servings.

1 package blackberry or black raspberry jello
1 cup sugar
Enough berries for pie

Mix the dry jello and sugar together and add to mulberries. Place in double crust and bake at 400°F. until crust is done. Cool and place in refrigerator. This will taste like blackberries or raspberries without the seeds.

Microwaving For Baby, Part 2: Solid Food

This is the second part of a two-part series on microwaving for your baby. Last week's column covered the safety of and directions for warming bottles in a microwave. Today, we'll look at solid baby foods, both commercial and homemade.

Warming Solid Baby Foods

Most baby foods can be warmed in the microwave. However, you will notice on the Gerber products, that some of the labels state: "DO NOT HEAT IN MICROWAVE OVEN, contents may splatter causing burns." This labelling is on their Plain Meats and Poultry, High Meat Dinners, Egg Yolks and Meat and Poultry sticks.

Steam pockets may build up in these thick foods, which will "explode" or splatter when the jar is shaken or stirred and may burn your hand. Steam will not be trapped this way in the vegetable and fruit products which are more watery.

Please note: Microwave heating of baby foods does not make them unsafe for your baby to eat. The cautionary labels are to prevent accidental burns from splattering.

Warm only the portion of food that you expect your baby to eat. Remove the cap on the jars, and warm the food right in the jar, or spoon food out to a small bowl. After warming, always stir to distribute the heat and check the temperature of the food before serving.

A good serving temperature for baby food is 100-110°F. Food at this temperature is just slightly warm, with no danger of burning your baby's mouth. If your microwave has a temperature probe (that reads as low as 100°F.) you could use this for warming food. You may, however, have a problem getting the probe to stay such small quantities.

A 4-ounce jar at room temperature will take 15-20 seconds to warm (to about 100°F) on high power. A 7-ounce jar will take 25-35 seconds to warm if at room temperature. If the jar is not full, reduce the time. If the food is refrigerated, start with these times, then stir and check the temperature. Add more time if needed.

If you can't easily set your oven for such short time periods, use a lower power level, such as medium (50,5), or defrost (30,3) to avoid overheating the food. A 4-ounce jar will take about 1 minute to warm on defrost (30,3); a 7-ounce jar will take about 1½ minutes to warm on defrost (30,3). A lower power level may also reduce the possibility of splattering on thicker foods.

Homemade Baby Food

Homemade baby foods are less expensive than commercially prepared foods. With a microwave, they don't take too long to prepare. Vegetables, fruits and meats can be steamed in your microwave until tender, then pureed and frozen until needed. And with home pureed foods, you know just what your baby's getting.

It's easy to steam vegetables, and fruits. Use a closed container with about ¼ cup water—just as you would for your family. When tender, puree fruits and vegetables in a blender or food processor, adding a little more water, if necessary.

Watch the consistency of the pureed food. If your baby's used to smooth foods, suddenly finding lumps in his green beans may cause him to revolt!

Poultry is easy to prepare too, but beef is a little harder. Steam skinned chicken or turkey pieces in a closed container with about ¼ cup water for 14 minutes per pound on 50 percent power. Let stand 10 minutes, then cut in pieces and puree. You will need to add more liquid when processing poultry and meats than when preparing fruits or vegetables.

Use 30 percent power for 20-21 minutes per pound to get the tenderest beef for your baby. Using a high power level may toughen meat, making it hard to puree.

Freeze the pureed food in a pop-out plastic ice cube tray, or drop little blobs of food on a cookie sheet and freeze. When frozen, store cubes or blobs in a freezer bag or carton for up to two months. (Be sure to label them, little blobs all look alike after a while!)

To serve, heat the frozen cubes or blobs in a bowl on high for 30-60 seconds each. Stir and check the temperature. These are small enough that you don't need to defrost them on a lower power first.

Here's a recipe for cereal that my boys loved as babies. I made it a few minutes early, so it could stand and cool while I got the baby dressed. Make it without egg yolks if your baby isn't eating yolks yet.

Baby Porridge

½ cup milk or formula
1 egg yolk
1 tablespoon Cream of Rice cereal

1. Mix egg and milk or formula until blended in a measuring cup or bowl. Stir in cereal.

2. Cook on high for 1 minute, then stir.

3. Cook on high for 30-60 seconds longer until the liquid comes to a boil. Stir, cover and let stand 5-10 minutes for the rice to soften, and the cereal to cool. Stir and check temperature before serving.

4. Promptly refrigerate any unused porridge. Makes about ½ cup. (Enough for two servings for a little one, or one serving for a big hungry one!)

TIP: Don't let the cereal boil hard or the egg yolk will thicken and curdle.

Note: The times above are for microwaves with 600-700 watts of power. For 500-600 W, add 10 seconds to each minute; for 400-500 W, add 20 seconds.

Alone, each of these one-time teen idols can ignite audiences with hit after hit; together, they make the stage explode with music and showmanship.

Frankie Avalon's name and face became synonymous with the highly successful "Beach Party" film series of the early 1960s, and since then, he's appeared in scores of films, both lighthearted and dramatic. His nightclub career has taken him around the world, headlining at clubs such as The Sands, the Copacabana, and the Fountainebleau in the States, and to clubs and stages in Australia, Japan, New Zealand, and the Phillipines.

Fabian. The name alone made teen-age girls' hearts melt, and his face could evoke shrieks and swoons from mothers and daughters alike. And today, the Philadelphia-born star's still got it. He's performing before packed stadiums and arenas across the country, and last year starred in his own concert series, "Fabian's Good Time Rock 'N Roll Show."

There are few entertainers today who can measure up to Bobby Rydell, a talented singer, actor, showman and comic. Schooled in the Big Band Era, Bobby emerged as one of "Baby Boomer" generation's biggest stars, and continues to wow audiences today with his smooth style. He's appeared in every major club in the United States and abroad, and continues a year-round concert schedule. Bobby, who lives in suburban Philadelphia with his wife and two children, will celebrate his 26th anniversary as a performer next month.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

As I write this article, I'm sitting in a 50-year-old log cabin in Black Moshannon State Park. There are 14 cabins here in the mountains. Some have two rooms but ours is a one room with four bunk beds, a table and bench, electric stove and a refrigerator.

In case it gets too cool, we do have a stove insert in a fireplace too. We traveled back to Lancaster after spending the weekend here as we wanted to attend a banquet meeting. When we returned the next day, after fishing in Bald Eagle State Park, we discovered we'd had a little visitor. Something chewed up our tissues on the table — maybe a chipmunk as there are a lot around our cabin.

We invited our two daughters for the weekend and by some odd chance we all arrived at exactly the same time. After a picnic lunch, we unloaded the car — pots and pans, blankets and sheets, food and about 50 miscellaneous items.

Our girls were great on hiking and so after an afternoon swim, we walked on Seneca and Hayroad Trails. The next day we hiked Indian Trail after an outdoor church service. They took pictures of ferns, flowers and fungus but weren't quick enough to snap the two grouse and I chased up among some huckleberry bushes.

After they left for their jobs, we went fishing, but only caught small perch which we threw back. At this writing there is a golden colored catfish in our refrigerator waiting for others to join him — we hope.

Allen, my husband, brings me buckets of water to cook and wash the dishes. The one inconvenience that I don't like is having to go 200 feet to the bathhouse and toilet. Last night a bear and two cubs visited a nearby camp site.

High Quality Of Home Frozen Foods Depends On Many Factors

Freezing is a popular method of food preservation because it is simple, fast, and if done correctly, causes fewer changes in foods than other methods of preservation.

The quality of frozen foods depends on many factors: the product used, the variety, the freshness of the food, how the food is handled prior to freezing, pretreatments, the type of packaging materials used, freezing rate, freezer temperature, temperature fluctuations during storage time, and finally the thawing, cooking and serving procedures.

Factors affecting the product to be frozen include the nature of the food, its cell structure and microorganisms.

Variety factors include texture, firmness and flavor.

Freshness of foods frozen hinges on maturity and ripeness in fruits and vegetables and aging, oxidation and microorganisms in meats and seafood.

Time and temperature are critical in the handling stage of getting food ready to be frozen. Pretreatments such as washing, color controls, blanching, and additives also affect quality.

A good package for a frozen food must withstand low temperature, be nontoxic, impart no odors or flavors to the food, provide water vapor barrier and be water-resistant. Air must be removed from the container or package, the seal must be tight, and labeling is important, so the consumer can use foods within the recommended storage times.

How fast a food is frozen depends on the type of freezer, its capacity, how large the frozen food package is, and how much food is to be frozen at one time. When foods are frozen slowly, ice forms between fibers and between cells and this results in cell rupturing, softness, loss of cell fluids and increased drip.

Fast freezing forms ice in and between fibers and cells and results in less rupturing of the cells, better food texture, less drip and better flavor.

For the best frozen foods, select good varieties of fresh, wholesome food and freeze it at peak quality. Proper washing, sorting, and trimming is essential. Some fruits and vegetables must be blanched and sugars, syrups or anti-darkening agents added. Skipping steps such as these can make the difference between a product you will want to serve or one you won't.

Water Softeners — A Laundry Aid For Hard Water

A major characteristic of water is its hardness. As water passes through the earth, minerals such as calcium and magnesium are frequently dissolved, making water "hard."

The more calcium and magnesium present, the harder the water and the more difficult cleaning becomes. In laundering, hardness minerals can combine with the many types of soil on clothes making the soil more difficult to remove.

By softening water, the calcium and magnesium ions can be removed or inactivated thus making the laundry detergent or soap more effective. Water softeners serve this function. There are packaged products and mechanical water softeners.

Packaged water softeners are of two types, both in dry form.

Nonprecipitating water softeners usually contain phosphates and soften water by tying up or sequestering the hardness minerals and holding them in solution. No visible solid particles form and the water remains clear.

Precipitating water softners may contain sodium carbonate or sodium sesquicarbonate. They soften the water by combining with hardness minerals to form a visible, insoluble solid, thus the water looks cloudy. This precipitate can cling to fabrics or washer parts leaving a visible chalky deposit.

Mechanical water softeners are an effective and practical solution for hard water areas. The equipment, installed in the home, utilizes ion exchange resins to remove calcium and magnesium ions. This is accomplished by exchanging clacium and magnesium for sodium ions from the ion exchange resins.

Md. State Fair manager got his start in 4-H

BY LINDA PAYNE OSBORNE

NEWARK, Del. – State Fair time! It's something many of us look forward to each summer, maybe 4-H members most of all. It's also a time of nostalgia for 4-H alumni who look back fondly on their own early fair days. But former 4-H'er Gary Simpson, general manager of the Delaware State Fair, Inc., not only lives with the excitement all year, he makes it happen for the rest of us.

Simpson moved up to general manager last January, having been with the fair since 1974 as assistant manager. In addition to planning the fair itself, he's busy all year managing the Harrington Raceway and coordinating the many events outside groups schedule at the fairgrounds.

According to Simpson, "There's something going on every weekend from May through August, and sometimes several things over August weekends. "We've got everything from livestock shows to tractor pulls and combine demolition derbies. Then from September 'til November there's harness racing, and even in the winter we're boarding about 500 horses in training for the races."

While his position is most often as a liaison, sometimes he gets his hands dirty, too. Recently he pitched in to help the Delaware Swine Producers Association build a new show ring. "We got it up in a day!" he says proudly.

Did his involvement in the Houston Cardinals, the first 4-H Club established in Delaware, influence his career choice? Simpson's answer is a resounding "Yes!" His 10 years in 4-H included projects and activities in dairy, livestock, swine, dog, poultry, health, safety, demonstration contests, public speaking, dairy and livestock judging, and junior council. He also attended National 4-H Congress.

That range of projects clearly reflects the demands of Simpson's daily duties: a broad knowledge of the interests represented in fair activities, and people-skills for management and communications.

Simpson points out that he never lived on a farm. His family owned about 1½-acres, the site for his own small livestock operation as a 4-H'er. A typical year might have found him tending a cow or two, or maybe a couple of pigs, or up to a dozen chickens.

"Through these projects," he says, "I developed a love for animals, and eventually realized my career would revolve around livestock. So my major in animal science at the University of Delaware was established. Then I got my master's in agricultural economics, so I had the background I needed for my future career at the fair. And of course," he adds, "the fair was always a highlight of my summer each year."

But as much as he enjoyed his backyard husbandry experience, 4-H provided other, even more valuable training. Through public speaking and demonstration competitions, as well as presenting his evaluations in dairy and livestock judging, he believes he learned to think on his feet and express himself well.

"It's a valuable skill for anyone to have," Simpson says. "I'm grateful for it not only as fair manager, but also in my work on the board of directors of the Milford Hospital and in my church."

Simpson's favorite aspect of 4-H was the contacts with people. "The best thing about each event was the chance to meet and make new friends—friends I've remained in contact with to this day. 4-H also provided me with countless positive role models who gave me inspiration, encouragement and insights needed to succeed in later life. What success I now enjoy, I credit to these individuals."

Simpson concludes: "Children need 4-H today even more than in the past. It's one of the greatest molders of character that I know. The role models are still there. The leaders are tremendous people. And the values developed through 4-H are, unfortunately, not stressed enough in other places any more."

When asked if he's still raising hogs and chickens at home, Simpson laughs. "No, it's just me and my wife, three kids and a dog. I'm afraid our Milford zoning precludes more than that for now. But we're looking forward to a time of backyard farming again."

Gary Simpson, general manager of the Delaware State Fair, tributes his career choice and success to boyhood 4-H experiences.

Norwegian IFYE makes stop in Del. during U.S. visit

BY LINDA PAYNE OSBORNE

NEWARK, Del. – For a young woman who speaks three foreign languages, loves traveling and is good at meeting people, the International 4-H Youth Exchange program seems like a natural. Marit Gresseth fills the bill. The 22-year-old Norwegian recently spent nearly a month in Delaware with the Cliff Moore family of Bear. She will now visit farms in Iowa for three months.

Marit arrived in Delaware on June 19 and spent her first full week at 4-H camp. She is especially interested in American 4-H because she was active in the Falken 4-H club in Norway for seven years and served as a professional leader.

She says that some camp activities were the same, but the emphasis on group experiences is much greater here. Dividing the Camp Barnes campers into Indian tribes seemed to encourage a sense of cooperation and teamwork that impressed her. She saw the oldest 4-H'ers help the younger ones and join with them in sing-alongs and games that would probably not appeal to older teenagers in Norway.

Norwegian 4-H'ers don't sleep in cabins or eat in a dining hall, either. Campers bring their own tents and provisions and cook meals outdoors. But the friendly spirit is the same both places, Marit says. "Everyone made me feel at home."

Her Delaware hosts, Cliff and Angela Moore, were well qualified to help Marit learn more about American farming and 4-H. Not only have they served as 4-H club leaders, but they've also raised four children who attended 4-H Congress as award winners. Valerie, age 20, lives at home and enjoyed being Marit's IFYE sister.

The daughter of dairy farmers, Marit is anxious to observe dairy farming in the Unites States. She visited one operation in Delaware, and hopes to see a variety of others in her travels throughout the country.

Her impression so far of American farms is that they are much larger than those in Norway. A typical Norwegian dairy farm would average 12 to 15 Norwegian red cows–multi-purpose animals well suited to the colder climate there. Equipment may also be bigger here, though it doesn't differ much in style or use from farm machinery in her country.

She watched Cliff Moore shear sheep, and says the procedure in Norway is exactly the same.

Another new cultural experience for Marit in Delaware was shopping at the Christiana Mall. She also spent a day watching Valerie at the restaurant where she works.

Marit and her hosts camped in a camper near Rehoboth for several days. Although she enjoyed the beach, she says that resort life was not part of the picture of America she had imagined. "I think Norwegians picture America as big and flat, with fields, corn and hogs," she explains. "Maybe it's because most Norwegian immigrants settle in the Midwest and that's the kind of photo they send back."

Marit is taking many slides so that she can give the people at home a more complete picture of the U.S. When she returns to Norway she will present programs on her trip, particularly to the 4-H groups, farmers' organizations and farm machinery companies that helped her with funding. Another condition of her exchange visit is that she write a formal report on American dairy farming and 4-H.

One of the biggest differences she sees between the two countries is that Americans often use cars when Norwegians would walk or bike. Americans eat more in general, and go out to eat far more than Norwegians do. Fast food and the convenience of drive-through restaurants are not part of thier lifestyle.

According to Marit, a typical day on a Norwegian farm begins and ends with baking heavy, dark bread. Breakfast consists of fresh bread and "lots of coffee." The family has its hot meal in the middle of the day and eats bread again for supper.

Before coming to Delaware, Marit and three other Norwegian exchangees went to West Virginia to visit an American friend who spent last year in Norway with IFYE. They traveled over much of the state, and she remembers mountains, coal mines, and a national park. Her IFYE orientation was in Washington, D.C. "Everything I saw there was beautiful," she says, "but my favorite place was the Air and Space Museum."

Marit and another former American IFYE exchangee drove from Delaware to an IFYE conference in Michigan, touring the Great Lakes area and Toronto. Then she was off to Iowa. Following her stay there she hopes to see some of the West, too, before returning home.

Marit left a job in Spain as a guide for a travel company to come to the United States, and she hopes to continue working in the travel industry. "I like to travel and work at the same time," she says. "And I'd rather talk with people than sit at a typewriter."

Milking parlor technician Earl Stoner explains operation of the University of Delaware's new electronic milking system to Norwegian IFYE visitor Marit Gresseth and hosts, New Castle 4-H agent Mark Manno, right, and Delaware 4-H state leader Marcius Butterfield.

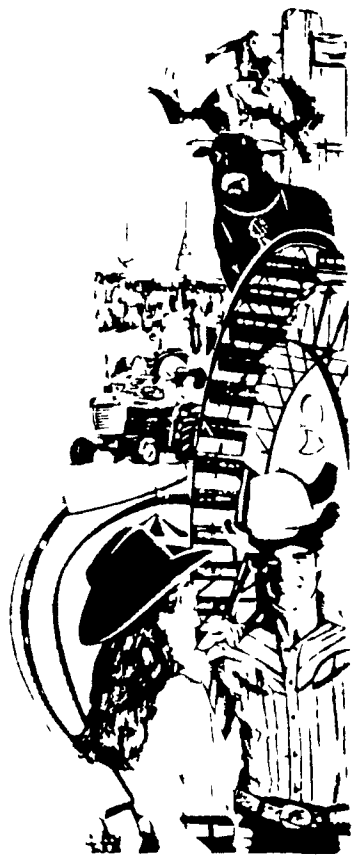
FAIR DAYS

Ritter family honored at Lycoming Fair



BY MARGIE FUSCO
Staff Correspondent

HUGHESVILLE – For 25 years, cows from Ritter-Ridge Farms, Muncy, have been trotting off with honors from the show ring at the Lycoming County Fair. This year the Ritter family itself took center ring at the close of the 1985 dairy show to receive some of their own accolades. The family, led by Wayne Ritter, was given an award for their contributions and continuing support of the dairy show.

The Ritter-Ridge herd took its share of trophies and ribbons, including Wayne Ritter's honors for showmanship in the Old Timers Showmanship Contest. However, top awards and the majority of the show's ribbons went to the Frank Nolan herd of Bellefonte. His Franlo-Alken Farms cows took grand and senior champion, junior champion and 19 ribbons as well in the Open Show.

Franlo-Alken Star Cathina took grand and senior champion trophies. A daughter of Round Oak Rag Apple Elevation, she was bred by Franlo-Alken Farms and shown by Charlene Nolan. A six-year-old, the cow has been classified 90 (EX) and has milked over 20,000 lbs. in 305 days of lactation with 750 lbs. butterfat. The trophy for the grand champion was donated by Twin Hills Veterinary Clinic.

Montgomery Co. Fair

NORRISTOWN — Montgomery County 4-H'ers will display their prize-winning cakes at 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 19 in the Show Pavilion at the Montgomery County Fair in hopes of topping the price paid for last year's grand champion cake.

Last year, a German chocolate cake baked by Valerie Milleer, the daughter of Mrs. Kenny Miller, Damascus, broke the county fair record of $1,000 when it brought $1,700 at the auction.

4-H members contribute their cakes to be auctioned and the proceeds benefit the 4-H program. This past year's monies have provided support to county activities to keep participation fees low.

Some monies provide for recognition of each county 4-H member and for the ribbons used for many activities.

Lycoming livestock sale nets $19,000

BY MARGIE FUSCO
Staff Correspondent

HUGHESVILLE — Final bids topped $19,000 at the Lycoming County Fair Livestock Show and Sale Friday, July 19. Top purchasers for the evening were Jersey Shore Livestock, with the largest dollar amount purchased and the Country Store of Pennsdale with the most head purchased. Special recognition was given to Sunset Ice Cream of Williamsport, which for the sixth year in a row purchased the grand champion steer.

The top steer, Heather Ream's 1122 lb. Chianina-cross, brought $1.37 a pound from Sunset Ice Cream. The reserve champion steer, owned by Doug Marquardt, an Angus cross weighing in at 1332 lbs., drew a winning bid of 85.5 cents a pound. Other beef, ranging in weight from 930 to 1237 lbs. sold for prices ranging from 57 cents to 65 cents a pound.

Best per-pound price came on Andrea Gavitt's grand champion hog, a 246-lb. Yorkshire cross bred by Roger Steppenhock. The hog was purchased by Hatfield Packing Company for $5.50 a pound. Susan Eck, owner of the reserve champion hog, a 229-lb. Landrace/Duroc cross bred by Ed Snook, sold her market hog to Sunset Ice Cream for $4.60 a pound. Other hogs, ranging from 175 to 238 lbs. in weight were purchased for 69 cents to $1.10 a pound.

Linda Lovell owned the grand champion market lamb, a 122-lb. home-bred Suffolk. North Eastern Farm Credit of Williamsport purchased the lamb for $4.85 a pound.

The reserve champion, Reagan Bitler's 106-lb. Suffolk bred by William DeWire, sold for $4 a pound to Sunset Ice Cream. Other lambs from 75 to 143 lbs. sold for 65 cents to $1.60 a pound.

While conducting the serious business of the sale, Howard Fraley of Fraley's Auction kept the crowd of 300 people on their toes. The evening began with the sale of three pairs of handmade sheepskin slippers, donated for the benefit of the Lycoming County Youth Livestock Association. Interspersed with the serious side of the sale were moments of fun, including some high bidding for a lamb raised by one of the smallest youth group members, and an attempt to pass off a piglet as a full grown hog that, according to Fraley, "Weighed in at 236 yesterday but dressed down a bit."

Two percent of the sale's proceeds will go to benefit the Lycoming County Youth Livestock Association.

Beat blight with There's a better in store for you.

Plus better storage out of your yield.

That's why more and more potato growers rely on a full season schedule of Bravo 500 fungicide.

Nothing equals Bravo 500 when it comes to preventing early and late blight infections that defoliate plants. And Bravo 500 is just as effective against Botrytis vine rot.

It's first-rate control like this, along with proper vine kill, that delivers a better yield at harvest. A healthier crop going into storage.

What's more, Bravo 500 has a built-in spreader/sticker that insures full and even coverage for maximum disease protection that keeps right on working, even during wet conditions.

And Bravo 500 can be applied by ground, air or through sprinkler irrigation systems.

For unequalled disease control that helps you store a better yield, make it Bravo 500 all season.

'Harvest Day' highlights the Juniata County Fair

PORT ROYAL, PA. – A new, day-long event has been scheduled for this year's Juniata County Fair to promote the multi-million dollar industry that's been so important to the county and its residents: Agriculture.

The Fair, scheduled to run from Aug. 31 through Sept. 7, will showcase agriculture with a full day of activities on Saturday, August 31.

The agricultural promotion day is being sponsored by the Juniata County Farmers' Association in cooperation with the Juniata County Agriculture Society, the Fair promoters.

A spokesperson for the group said the promotion will include as many agricultural organizations and agricultural areas as possible. All events for the promotion, titled "County Harvest Day," will be held at the Juniata County Fairground's dairy barn and the immediate vicinity.

At 2 p.m., the official opening ceremonies for the County Harvest Day will get underway, with all exhibits being officially opened to the public.

Other activities for County Harvest Day get underway at 2:30 p.m. with the Fair's first ever Agriculture Olympic Games for children. At least three events will be held as part of the "Ag Games" with prizes awarded the winners.

The highlight of the day could come at 3 p.m. for most people in attendance when the "Cow Milking Contest" begins. Sponsored by the Juniata County Holstein Club, the milking contest will pit several public officials including Juniata County's State Rep. Walt DeVerter, against four sprint car drivers who race regularly at the Port Royal Speedway. Drivers scheduled to try their hand at milking are Keith Kauffman, Joe Gravino, Johnny Martin, and Jim Nace.

Following the fun and games of the milking contest, things will really get down to business with a "bread-and-butter" Milking Demonstration by the 4-H Dairy Club. This event begins at 4 p.m.

A bit of agriculture's proud history will be highlighted beside the dairy barn at 3:30, 4:30 and 7 p.m. when LaRue Ryan provides onlookers with an up-close view of a threshing machine in operation.

At 5 p.m., the spotlight will be placed on the Juniata County 4-H Dairy Goat exhibition. A demonstration on the care of a newborn will be presented.

The rabbit display will feature a demonstration by the Happy Hoppers on the care of a domestic rabbit. And The Juniata County Sheep Growers will conduct a sheep shearing demonstration at 6 p.m.

All the ground prizes, which will be given away at 6:30 p.m., will be agricultural products from Juniata County such as cheese, fruit, vegetables, poultry products, etc. Individuals must be present to win. Ticket for the drawing will be available at the main Juniata County Agricultural booth in the dairy-barn.

A fitting and showing demonstration will be held at 7 p.m. by the Juniata County 4-H Baby Beef Club.

The day-long activities will end with the juiciest story of the day, when McClure's Fruit Farm will demonstrate the making of apple cider.

In addition to the time-scheduled activities, promoters of the event have slated several special promotions that will be presented throughout the day.

The 4-H Dairy Club will offer a day-long exhibit entitled "The Dairy Cow." The exhibit will explain and outline the various stages of a dairy cow from the beginning to end of its life cycle. The 4-H Dairy Club will be offering artificial insemination demonstrations throughout the day as well.

Any ag-related enterprise interested in taking part in the "County Harvest Day" activities can contact Sue Pontius, County Information Director for the Juniata County Farmers' Association, by calling 717-589-3719.

The Juniata County Fair is held in Port Royal, Pa., at the Port Royal exit off U.S. Route 22/322, west of Harrisburg.

Tuesday is Ag Showcase at Cecil County Fair

ELKTON, MD – Cecil County's fourth annual Agricultural Showcase Day will be held on Tuesday during the Cecil County Fair.

The morning program will demonstrate numerous hay making machinery equipment pieces that will include mower/conditions, tedders and square and round balers.

After lunch at approximately 1:30 p.m., the University of Maryland Extension Service will conduct a clinic on sprayer calibration. Extension Specialist Gary Smith, University of Maryland Agricultural Engineering Department, will be the featured speaker for the afternoon clinic.

Immediately following the clinic will be field demonstrations of various new agricultural equipment. Examples will include the automatic subsoiler and the "Soil Saver."

Bushey appointed extension 4-H agent

MEDIA — Nancy Bushey, a Delaware Valley graduate and a former herdsman, was recently appointed 4-H youth extension agent in Delaware County.

Bushey says four years of farm work in the United States and Denmark have prepared her for her position. Her work was ideal preparation, she said, because it offered an opportunity to work with both suburban and rural people.

As 4-H and youth agent, Bushey will devote most of her time to the 4-H food production program, a device used to instruct school children on animal production. She is also planning small animal science and veterinary programs to teach children about proper animal care.

Bushey earned a bachelor's degree in animal husbandry from Delaware Valley College in 1981. Since then, she has worked as a clerk in McCullough's Feed Store in Media, and as an assistant herdsman with the Ardrossan Farm in Villanova. Between 1981 and 1982, she was a herdsman with the Graulund Farm in Aulum, Denmark.

Conneaut Lake Quilt Show

BY BARBARA RADER
Staff Correspondent

CONNEAUT LAKE — The Fourth Annual Quilt Show held at High Street Community Church, Conneaut Lake, drew a record number of .quilts to make this year's show the best ever.

Thirty-six quilt enthusiasts entered a total of 104 quilts which filled the church's sanctuary and Sunday school rooms, drawing a crowd estimated at over 350.

The three-day event, held July 11 to 13, drew entries from Conneaut Lake, Meadville, Renfrew, Butler, Linesville, Turtle Creek, Bradford, Cochranton, Venus and Sheffield Lake, Ohio.

The oldest quilt displayed was a 158-year-old piece exhibited by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ayers of Conneaut Lake. The family heirloom was done in a leaf design.

Since the annual show began four years ago, the exhibition has drawn visitors from 18 states, including Hawaii, and also from Hungary. The local church sponsors the event and quilt fanciers are already talking about entries for next year's show.

Official judges for the show were Alice Stright, Meadville; Gwen Kaltaft, Conneaut Lake; and Helena Hartshorne, Meadville. People who attended the show were also asked to vote.

Winners in each category are listed below:

Corn Growers call for ag credit panel

ST. LOUIS, Mo. – The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) has strongly urged President Reagan to immediately establish an Agricultural Credit Crisis Panel to provide a high level review of the entire agricultural credit system. NCGA's letter to the President said this Panel would:

• Analyze and ensure the short-term stability and solvency of the Farm Credit System.

• Provide transitional coordination between the current credit crisis and the completion of the 1985 Farm Bill.

• Provide recommendations on the long-term credit needs of agriculture.

"The credit crisis facing American agriculture affects not only thousands of farmers, but main street rural America including agricultural lending institutions," says NCGA President Varel Bailey of Anita, Iowa. "Most significant is the potential collapse of the Farm Credit System – the lender holding 40 percent of all farm debt totaling $78 billion.

"In addition, NCGA is calling on the respective House and Senate committees to hold immediate hearings on the farm credit crisis and specifically the solvency and reform of the Farm Credit System," says Bailey

There are four different G tractor models, including the G3200 you see here. It has a strong, 10 horsepower 2-cylinder diesel engine and a live front PTO shaft drive to the mower.

See the Kubota G tractors for yourself and you'll want to get behind the wheel of a diesel.

Farm Talk

by

Jerry Webb

Your share of food dollar

It must be pretty upsetting to a farmer to realize that the company that delivers a loaf of bread to the supermarket gets more of the retail food dollar than the guy who produced the wheat. But that is the situation–a situation that is true for most agricultural products where processing, packaging, delivering and retailing functions take a far greater share of the food dollar than the food growing function.

A study by the U.S. Department of Agriculture indicates that the difference between the farm price and the retail price for major food items varies from as little as one-third to as much as 90 percent of the store price. Included on that list are such items as beef, pork, fluid milk, butter, eggs, broilers, potatoes, bread, and orange juice.

Historically, this spread has widened as consumers have opted for more of the services and conveniences provided by our present-day food marketing system.

There was a time when a peddler with a cart brought milk to the consumer's door and there was no price spread–the farmer got it all. But that was long before the supermarket phenomena which has gradually changed our whole approach to food marketing.

Now a food shopper goes to one or two stores and buys everything. And as she complains of the high cost of food, she continues to select convenience items with an increasing farm-to-retail price spread.

Not many consumers these days are peeling potatoes and whacking up whole chickens as a way of cutting down that difference between what the farmer gets and what the consumer pays.

So the price spread continues to increase and the farmers' share of the food dollar continues to shrink. While it's easy to get upset about the huge differences for some food items, even farmers realize that there are a lot of services provided between the farm gate and the supermarket checkout counter.

Bread is the classic example of this food marketing phenomena. There was a time when the farmer took his grain to a mill and sold it. The miller turned it into flour; the housewife bought the flour from the miller and made her own bread. In that case, the farmers' share of the food dollar was rather high and the retail price spread was minimum.

Today there are a whole throng of people between the farmer and the consumer and each takes a big cut. As the USDA study points out, the farm share is about one-eighth and all of the other services get seven-eighths.

The farmer who's upset about the price of wheat must understand that he's getting a very small share of the consumer food dollar. Measured by volume he provides most of what goes into a loaf of bread but his inputs are in the raw ingredients form. A lot must be done to that wheat before it's a neatly wrapped loaf of bread on a supermarket counter.

Retail spreads vary considerably depending on the kind of product involved. Obviously there's not much done to an egg between its farm source and the ultimate buyer. In fact most egg farms do all of the packaging and some even take care of the wholesale and delivery function. So the retail price spread is no more than one-third. Pork and beef, on the other hand, [illegible] considerable processing and the price spread can be much greater.

The Deaprtment of Agriculture is spending time and money trying to help farmers decrease that price spread. It's looking for ways to help farmers market their products directly to consumers.

Certainly there are ways that will allow some farmers to sell some of their produce through roadside markets, farmers markets and other direct selling methods.

But the bulk of our agricultural produce–corn, soybeans, pork, beef, vegetables–are produced in enormous quantities far from the consumer. They require costly processing, transporting and marketing functions. No amount of research will change that and no amount of complaining or worrying will increase the farmers' share of the food dollar.

Increased farm incomes in the future won't come from smaller food price spreads. A shrinking share to the farmer is inevitable as the demands of labor and other increased costs are added to the farm price.

New AgCHEK module aimed at livestock bookkeeping

ST. PAUL, MN. – Control Data has added an optional livestock module to its AgCHEK computerized financial recordkeeping system. AgCHEK is an agricultural software package that helps professional farmers manager their business finances.

The livestock module helps livestock producers control costs and improve marketing by tracking inventory, production costs and actual-vs.-budgeted expenses, by group or lot.

AcCHEK is the only farm accounting system with both integrated crop and livestock modules, making it a complete system for farmers and ranchers.

In addition to the major financial reports produced by the AgCHEK system such as balance sheet, income statement, enterprise reports, cash flow, Schedule F and normal journals and registers, the livestock module produces reports on cost of production, production efficiency, inventory, and hedges and contracts. The optional crop module produces reports on cost of production, field histories, inventory, and hedge and contract maintenance reports.

User manuals and training are included for ease of start-up. Ongoing support is provided to keep systems running smoothly.

AgCHEK is available through local dealers. It operates on IBM-PC and compatible microcomputers. Dealers are equipped to provide both hardware and software.

Back to the Indians

It has been suggested that the way to solve our domestic and foreign problems is to give the whole United States back to the Indians. Only a few hundred years back, they were the sole inhabitants and owners of this great land. Lo, the poor Indian is now one of the poorest of our minority groups. Now that we have made a proper mess of the whole thing, why not give it back to the original owners!

History always proves that such a thing is impossible. Only in the West can we still find a few of the descendants of ancient Indian tribes who still retain their old culture and way of life. And they want back only what we "Angelos" have taken from their ancestors. No more - no less.

We recently spent a week in Taos, New Mexico, the home land of the Taos Pueblo Indians. We studied their art and culture, visited in their 800-year-old adobe homes, and rubbed elbows with many of the people. They invited us to watch the ceremonies that they have performed to usher in the spring planting season for thousands of years.

The Corn Dance is an annual ritual performed to please the Wak'an who brings the right combination of sun and rain to assure a good crop. The annual foot races for the young men of the tribe are held the day before the corn dance. It begins at sun-up, after a night of fasting and self-preparation for the race. The purpose of the race is not to compete among themselves to find the fastest runner, but to generate energy for the sun to rise higher into the sky to warm the earth and make it fruitful.

These ceremonies contain a paradox, in that they combine some Christian faith with some of their ancient traditions. The day begins with services in the Catholic Chapel within the walls of the Pueblo, but from then on, the festivities follow the arts and practices of hundreds of generations of Pueblo ancestors.

The young men and boys paint their naked bodies in colorful designs, some all white or all black, some streaked with green or blue, outlining bodily features in all sorts of grotesque and weird designs. Many will attach feathers to thongs around their neck or ankles, and some simply paste small feathers over their back and chest. The only clothing is a breech-clout.

They run the race barefoot over a dirt course partly covered with gravel. No one wins, but they obviously put everything into the race to make it look real. What counts is that the sun can now continue its course, climbing higher into the sky and warming the earth.

The Taos Pueblo tribe numbers about 2000 people, which we were told is nearly constant over several hundred years. They are among the few sedentary tribes that have practiced agriculture for centuries. Unlike their nomadic neighbors the Apaches and Navahoes, they did little hunting or wandering.

The Pueblo itself is a large apartment house, five stories high, and is known to be at least 800 years old. The adobe brick structure is supported in the center by walls eight feet thick.

They have practiced excellent craftmanship in maintaining the original architecture, and preserving with it a semblance of an ancient and honorable way of life. It is a way based on deep religious feelings of a dependency on the Great Mystery, which simply translates into what we would call our God.

Although the Taos Pueblo Indians did develop irrigation and intensive agriculture, they do less of it today. The best land along the Rio Grande River has been taken over by the Great White Father in Washington, long ago. The best use of the remaining semi-arid desert is as rangeland for a few beef cattle. And that will support only about one cow on 15 or 20 acres.

So I guess we'll think twice about giving our good land back to the Indians, even when things look kind of bleak for us. Our short stay with the Pueblos opened our eyes and our hearts to the trials and troubled life of a proud and noble people who maintain their strong spirit in spite of a raw deal from the "civilized" white people.

Ultrafiltration to change manufacture of cheese

ITHACA, NY – There's a quiet revolution stirring in the cheese industry. New biotechnological processes are boosting yields and the nutritional value of cheese while specialty cheeses, including goat cheese, are taking bigger wedges of an expanding cheese market.

A process called ultrafiltration is one of the main causes of the revolution. It is enabling food scientists to increase cheese yields up to 80 percent from the same amount of milk, and to improve the protein and calcium content of cheese while reducing sodium levels.

One of the most versatile foods known to man, cheese is used in hors d'oeuvres, in thousands of main dishes, as a topping for vegetables, as an accompaniment to fruit, and as an essential ingredient in many desserts. "Discovered" several thousand years before Christ, cheese is formed from the coagulation of milk–be it cow, sheep, goat, horse, buffalo, camel, or even reindeer–that produces curd by the action of an enzyme or acid.

Now, a new technology is modifying an old technique.

"Ultrafiltration will radically change the cheese industry," predicts Frank Kosikowski, professor of food science at Cornell University. "It's biotechnology at its best."

The process involves pumping milk through a very fine membrane that consists of many pores of uniform size. Water and the soluble components of milk, including lactose, and salts, flow through. The parts of the milk that do not filter through include fats, proteins, insoluble salts, and enzymes, forming the retentate. As the mixture becomes increasingly concentrated, the retentate becomes very high in fat and protein.

If milk is concentrated on the farm, transportation costs can be significantly reduced because so much of the water has been removed. Furthermore, the "permeate," the solution that flows through the membranes, can be uses to feed cows, resulting in a 5 to 10 percent savings in feed, Kosikowski estimates.

Ultrafiltration also has enabled Cornell food scientists to produce a low lactose ice cream, a boon for the lactose intolerant, as well as a low sodium cheddar cheese that rates very high in texture and taste.

Dramatic changes are not only occurring in the production end of cheese, but in the consumption end. In 1983, each American consumed a record 24.3 pounds of cheese. From 1972 to 1982, the food that increased the most in consumption was cheese according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"In the ten-year period, there was a 47 percent increase in the per capita consumption of cheese," points out Kosikowski, a professor in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell. "Chicken was next highest at 22 percent, while many foods declined."

Although no one knows how many different types of cheese there are, Kosikowski points out that more imported and specialty cheeses are being purchased throughout the country. In 1982, for example, 270 million pounds of foreign cheese were imported to supplement our domestic supply of 5 billion pounds.

Goat cheese, in particular, has undergone dramatic consumption changes. Although still a small slice of the overall cheese picture, its consumption has risen dramatically. In 1983, Americans ate about 230 tons, double the rate of 1982.

"There seems to be a very rapid growth in the goat cheese industry across the country," Kosikowski says. "Goats are endemic in all states. People who have them fall in love with them. The goats, in turn, produce milk which can be made into a fine cheese, if handled properly."

With more than 50 varieties of goat cheese available in the U.S., American producers are increasing their production facilities in anticipation of still greater demand.

Goat cheese is just one indication of an expanding domestic cheese industry. Says Kosikowski: "The evolutionary period in domestic specialty cheeses has just started. We have a lot of catching up to do to reach the diversity, taste, and quality of European cheeses – but we are well on our way, producing some very fine products now."

Students, profs put learning to work

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. – On 176 acres of the university's cropland, students of The Pennsylvania State University are demonstrating ways to create a small farm and make it work. This season, the students are growing their first crop at the College of Agriculture's Circleville Farm.

The Circleville Farm, established about two miles west of the University Park campus last fall, is meant to provide students with farm experience and to serve as an interdisciplinary classroom for small-scale agriculture that is both profitable and ecologically sound. The farm is also used for Extension purposes.

"The students are not only getting hands-on farm experience, they're also making most of the management decisions. I don't know of any other farm like it at a land-grant university," said Bill Kruesi, who joined the Penn State faculty as Farm Manager on June 1.

About 150 students have had a hand in the Circleville Farm's management and labor since last fall. Through courses ranging from soil conservation, to architectural design, to real estate appraisal they have helped plan a diverse collection of small-scale farm enterprises. To carry out their plans, they have volunteered their labor.

"Seeing the students pitch in at planting time was the high point of the entire program so far," said Carolyn Sachs, assistant professor of rural sociology and director of the farm. "One Saturday we had 15 students out there learning to drive tractor and plant oats."

So far, the students have taken over management of some 80 acres at Circleville. They have 25 acres in corn this season, along with 20 in alfalfa and grass mixtures, and another 20 in oats and clover. They also have sweet corn, paste tomatoes, two kinds of melons, and a four-acre woodlot.

Bill Kruesi, the new manager of the student farm at The Circleville Farm, Penn State's student farm, stands in front of the barn that the students are in the process of rebuilding. The students provide the labor and make many of the management decisions.

The students are avoiding chemical herbicides. They seeded new hay fields in both oats and clover because the oats keep the weeds down while the clover gets established.

"Some of the alfalfa they planted clear–without oats–and the weeds have grown in, but it really isn't as bad as it looks," said Kruesi. "Wanda Crosby, the student in charge of that field, has been trying to decide whether to mow the weeds. I suggested she mow half the field and watch what happens.

"They're doing the same kind of experimenting with the horticulture crops," said Kruesi. "Half the mellons are fertilized, half aren't. We try to squeeze as much education as possible out of our crops."

"We don't pursue small-scale operations because we're trying to mimic a family farm," said Sachs. "A family would specialize more. We're trying to demonstrate a lot of different things and help farmers learn new techniques."

"If we can't interest working farmers in visiting Circleville farm, we're missing something," said Kruesi. "Eighty percent of Pennsylvania's farmers run small or part-time operations. We're here to demonstrate small-scale techniques that may help them. We'll even tell people what we do wrong. That's the way to learn.

"Right now we're arranging for a workshop to show people how to open bee hives and collect honey. We've got three hives just down the lane from the trailer where we keep our office," said Kruesi.

"I hope that just about anyone can come to our farm and feel at home," said Kruesi. "We're also creating a self-guided tour–a brochure and a series of signs to tell visitors about each field and garden."

The farm's husbandry operations are still in the planning stages. "In Harvey Manbeck's Ag Engineering course last spring the students figured out how many animals the farm could support and designed housing for them," said Sachs.

"We've got the big barn that came with the place all cleaned out and repaired, and by next spring we'll have another pole barn put up," said Sachs. "Eventually we hope to have a full range of animals--sheep, cattle, hogs, poultry. Maybe we can bring in the first of them next year."

Most of Circleville Farm's machinery came from an auction in Belleville. "For $6,000 we got a spreader, two hay wagons, binder, baler, planter, cultivator, plow, and disc," said Sachs. "They're old machines, but they're serviceable."

"It's true that most of Penn State's agriculture students have never worked on a farm," Sachs said. "Most of them never will be farmers, either. But our graduates will be working in agriculture-related fields. It's essential that we provide them an opportunity to gain some practical experience."

Home Garden Crop Failures

Now's the time when most gardeners begin to harvest their crops and benefit from their labors. But even when they follow all the directions in the literature or on the seed packet, gardeners can be faced with the dreaded situation of crop failure.

Poor crop response is often caused by conditions we can't control. The weather can play a strong role in gardening success. Failure to appreciate the crop's needs or cultural limitations adds to the problem.

Gardeners need to learn as much as possible about crop needs. It's easy to know when there is a problem if there's an understanding of a plant's needs and responses. Not all garden plants need the same conditions found within the confines of a small garden space. When a variety of plants are put in the same cultural system, different cultural practices may create problems. For success, the needs of each plant group will have to be met every time.

However, there are some weather-related situations that may produce results not mentioned on the seed packet or in plant literature. Adjustments to gardening practices can accomodate most situations.

Here are some tips on handling common crop problems:

Beans that fail to come up or give sparse germnation may have been planted too early in cool soil. Beans germinate quickly in warm soil and produce a very uniform stand. As the season develops, healthy plants may have no fruit (beans) because the flowers frequently drop in hot, dry or windy weather.

Beets that develop no root system are probably overcrowded and not thinned according to the directions on seed packets.

Small broccoli plants with poor heading and premature flowers may have been chilled too much at the garden center before they were planted. A light frost could have also injured them in the garden. Broccoli responds well to optimum levels of fertility.

Carrots with poor root formation are probably too close together and not thinned properly. Several inches of room are needed between plants. Poorly prepared soil will produce short, poorly formed roots.

Cauliflower is a plant that does best in the early season. Plants set out too late often form loose, small heads. The cauliflower head is actually the flower of the plant, and if it forms in warmer weather, it will not have the desired compactness. Starter fertilizer will get cauliflower off to a stronger start earlier in the season.

Cucumber plants usually do well, but it is their fruit we seek for slicing or pickling. Discard misshapen fruit from the poor or incomplete pollination of the female flower. Cool, wet weather will often slow the activity of bees needed to carry pollen. The same weather conditions may cause developing fruit to drop from the vines. A sudden wilting of the entire plant results from the disease carried by cucumber beetles.

Muskmelon will respond to garden conditions favorable to cucumbers. Both plants have the same cultural requirements.

Eggplants need warm soil for best growth and development. Small or stunted plants recover slowly. In future seasons, use black plastic to warm the soil around the roots.

Peppers were often subject to wilt disease in the past, but better industry selections makes this less of a problem today. Peppers grow as healthy plants with no fruit. Hot, dry winds and warm nights or overfertilization will reduce fruit growth.

Tomatoes are probably the most popular garden plant. They will grow well as long as conditions in the garden are not extreme. Cool night temperatures below 55°F. and hot days above 95°F. will cause flowers to drop from the plant. Variations in moisture supply will also cause fruit to crack on certain varieties. Rotting fruit on the blossom's end (blossom end rot) is not a disease, but a problem caused by low levels of calcium and irregular supplies of moisture. If you follow soil test directions and mulch, this problem often passes.

An understanding of garden problems may not make them disappear, but you can modify gardening practices to reduce their impact on future harvests.

Re-creation booked at Lebanon Area Fair

LEBANON – The Lebanon Area Fair announced today that Re-Creation, the singing and dancing group from Port Trevorton, will appear at the fair Tuesday, Aug. 6. Shows will be at 7:30 & 8:45 p.m.

USDA gives Penn State $2,500 for apprenticeship

STATE COLLEGE – Dr. Donald B. Thompson, assistant professor of food science at The Pennsylvania State University, received a $2,500 grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to participate in the Cooperative State Research Service Apprenticeship Program.

The program is designed to stimulate interest among minority high school students in food and agricultural science careers. Scientists who are conducting USDA funded research through the Agricultural Experiment Station or the Agricultural Research Service are eligible to compete for funding. Apprentices receive an hourly wage and may also receive housing and travel assistance.

Laurie B. Williams, a senior at the John Harris Campus of Harrisburg High School, has been selected as the apprentice. She will work with Dr. Thompson and other research scientists on a project to study the impact of food protein processing on mineral binding to protein fractions. Laurie will learn laboratory techniques and assist scientists in the separation and analysis of food protein solutions.

This is the fifth year Penn State's College of Agriculture has participated in the Apprenticeship Program. This year's apprentice will also attend sessions of the Agricultural Institute for Minority Students, a week-long residential program for high school students interested in attending Penn State to study agricultural sciences and technology.

GEHL®

IF IT'S FEATURES YOU WANT — TRY GEHL

WE HAVE A SPECIAL TRUCKLOAD SALE JUST RECEIVED

The first loader of its kind

Now there's a new elite class of loader. The totally new Gehl 3510. Designed for the kind of efficiency, convenience and comfort found only in world-class, high performance machines.

You'll appreciate the roomier cab. The easy, unobstructed access. All made possible by the new split, side-mounted T-bars. Your arms stay on the armrests for greater comfort. For more precise bucket and drive control. As soon as you feel the smooth, positive hand action, you'll recognize a superior performer.

You'd expect convenience from these Gehl classics. And you get it. No other loader its size can boast of as much. Like new Hydro-Lock for switching load arm attachments from your seat. Self-leveling. Easy maintenance. Just remove two bolts to flip up cage and seat without disconnecting wiring harness. Locks in place while you work. And the slatted floor with removable rubber mats lets you flush out dirt and debris.

There's new comfort too. A wider, softer seat The new ROPS/FOPS cage with rear safety glass keeps noise down and dirt out. An overhead instrument panel lets you monitor performance at a glance.

3510: Gas, 850 lb. SAE rating. You've never seen anything like it.

A winner at any job, from start to finish

Smooth, chain reduction hydrostatic drive And a reliable, fuel efficient Ford industrial gas power. Liquid cooled Sollenberger Silos Corp.

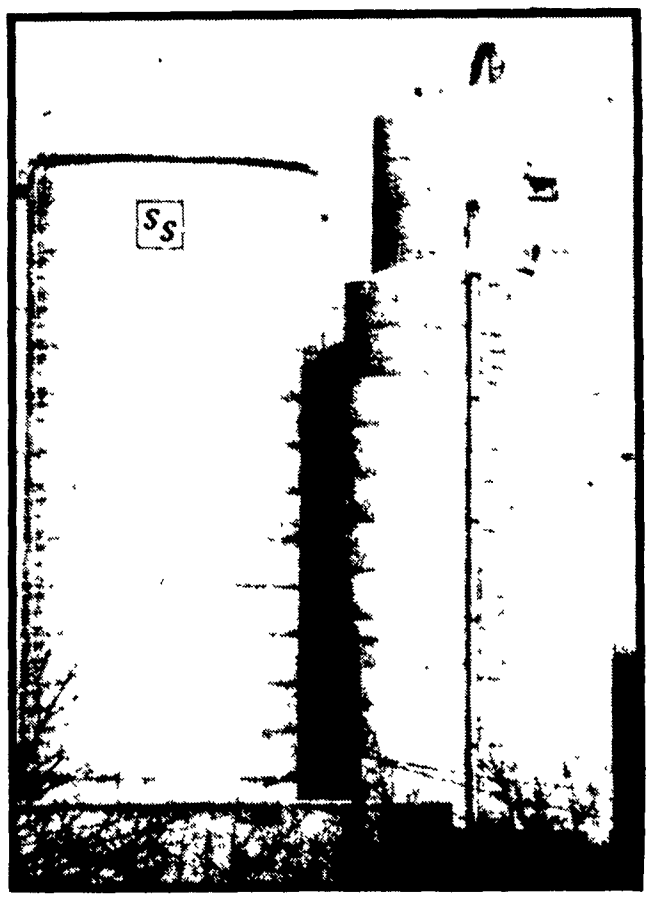
"YOU'LL APPRECIATE THE QUALITY OF A SOLLENBERGER SILO FOR MANY YEARS TO COME."

DAIRYMEN
Are you tired of raking hay over & over hoping it will dry enough to bale, or perhaps store in a structure that requires low moisture for unloading?

If you're ready for something better, give us a call right away; we have 3 great alternatives. Let us help solve this problem before the summer is over.



We've moved to our new location; about 2 miles south of Chambersburg on U.S. Rt. 11. Our mailing address and phone number remain the same. Give us a call today for your new fall silo.

Main Features of a Sollenberger Bottom Unloading Silo

- 6" Solid Concrete Wall
- No Drying Expense
- Reduced Shrinkage and Spoilage
- Continuous Filling and Feeding
- Lower Field Losses
- Lower Feed Cost

Since the early 1900's, Sollenberger Silos has been designing and constructing monolithic concrete silos Always concerned with quality construction, Sollenberger continuously strives to improve their products as engineers study and design new innovations for strength, utility, and efficiency

With local dealer-representatives throughout the Mid-Atlantic area, we can continue to provide these quality silos to a large number of farmers

Before you buy any concrete silo compare Sollenberger s quality construction and features Every Sollenberger Silo has full 6 solid steel reinforced quality controlled concrete walls Compare this with other concrete silos Our thicker stronger walls help silage remain at a relatively constant temperature resisting freezing and heat damage resulting in less spoilage and better silage

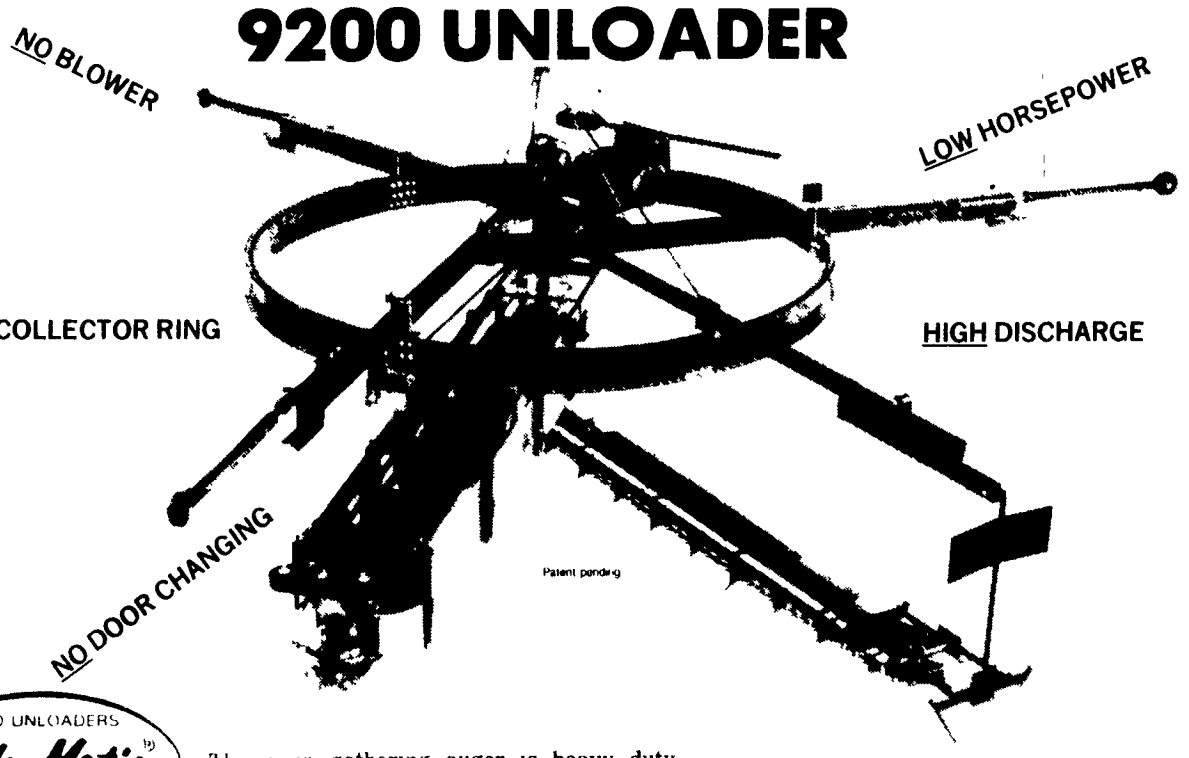
FICKES SILO CO. PRESENTS
The NEW Silo-Matic 9200 UNLOADER



SILO UNLOADERS Silo-Matic FEEDING SYSTEMS

The main gathering auger is heavy duty 16" diameter, with 5/16" flighting mounted on a 4" tube The auger has adjustable front and rear 14 gau galvanized shields, for maximum capacity The auger is powered by a 60 lb. gearbox which brings forage to the center for the delivery chain
To deliver the high volume of forage from the sweep auger to the inside chute, a heavy duty hook chain with hardened cutters is used to convey the forage. The stainless steel top shield is easily removed to adjust the chain if needed. The plate and V pipe keep the delivery chain positioned over the inside chute in the forage.

In today's economy stress, you must feed your cows properly
Put in trough dividers, with fold up flaps to make easy sweeping It prevents late lactating cows of over-eating & gives the high producers more time to eat their feed which results in more dry matter intake and more milk.
Being able to know exactly what each cow eats will be a benefit to you and the cow
We also build self locking head gates and cattle guards, gutter grates

Two weeks after Regional win...

Maryland heifer tops Nat'l Jr Angus Show

TULSA, Okla. — An Eastern heifer went West to be named the top female in the 17th National Junior Angus Show held July 9 to 12, at the Tulsa State Fairgrounds, Tulsa, Okla.

For his champion in the 317-head owned heifer show, judge Joe Bill Meng gave the nod to his intermediate winner, HF Duchess 451. This May 1984 QLC Winchester daughter was shown by Susan Moxley, 21, of West Friendship, Md.

Moxley's stylish heifer has proven to be tough show competition all season, being named national calf champion in Denver in January, then going on to take top honors in the Eastern Regional Junior Angus Show on June 29.

At reserve was E&W Dolly, a June 1984 daughter of Greenbrae Chairman, shown by 18-year-old Stacia Ellis of Greentown, Ind.

Two judges were on hand to place the 497 heifers, bulls, steers and cow/calf pairs at this year's show. Joe Bill Meng of Bowling Green, Ky., placed both owned and bred-and-owned heifers, bred-and-owned bulls and cow/calf pairs. Serving as judge for the Registered Steer Show was Dr. Bob Kropp of Stillwater, Okla.

Both the grand champion and reserve grand champion of the 94-head bred-and-owned heifer division came from the junior classes. Claiming the purple rosette with his junior champion, Premier Venus, was Ryan Cotton, 15, Howell, Michigan. This heifer is a January 1984 daughter of Premier Independence KN. Jody Brisbin, 14, Longmont, Colorado, was directed to the reserve grand champion bred-and owned heifer spotlight with her reserve junior champion, 4B Big Sky Sophia. She is a February 1984, Pine Drive Big Sky daughter.

Two Fairfield Hi Guy sons captured the grand and reserve grand champion banners in the bred-and-owned bull division. Prince of Shiloh, born January 1984, was named junior and grand champion bull for 16-year-old Amy Ostrom, Loganville, Georgia. Omegan Domino, the reserve junior winner, was declared the reserve grand champion bull for Cliff Simmons II, 19, Williamston, Michigan.

Judge Meng chose Black Gold Erica Rose and her February Dr. Spock bull calf as the grand champion cow/calf pair. They were exhibited by 21-year-old, Linda Kroeker, Hutchinson, Kansas.

In the 47-head Registered Steer Show, judge Kropp awarded champion honors to a 1,220 pound entry of Andy Kapp, 17, Clarksdale, Missouri. Kapps Poncho, an April 1984 son of Kapps Power Master 025, had a weight per day of age of 2.72 pounds. A 1,270 pound, February 1984, Premier Independence KN son was named the reserve champion steer. Shown by Angela Smith Dick, 19, Russell Springs, Kentucky, Premier Citation had a weight per day of age of 2.46 pounds.

Along with the "on-hoof" judging, an optional carcass show took place. Steers entered in the live steer division at the National Junior Angus Show, could also be entered in the carcass division, and those steers entered in the carcass division were also shown in the live division.

The final placings in the carcass division were determined by using a 50-percent carcass placing index and a 50 percent on-hoof placing index.

Dr. Fred Ray and his staff at Oklahoma State University, Stillwater, judged the 20 carcasses.

The champion carcass was entered by Sam McGee, 15, Pulaski, Tennessee. His May 1984, Fairfield Hi Guy steer weighed 1,115 pounds; had a weight per day of age of 2.6 pounds; a hot carcass weight of 657 pounds; graded low choice; and had a 1.2 yield grade.

The steer with the highest combined scores was entered by Sheri Rentz, 15, Coldwater, Ohio. Her June 1984, Pine Drive Big Sky steer weighed 1,100 pounds; had a weight per day of age of 2.72 pounds; a hot carcass weight of 666 pounds; graded low choice; and had a 2.4 yield grade.

National Angus Showmanship Awards

They came from all four directions of the compass to compete in the National Junior Angus Showmanship Contest. A total of 60 young Angus showmen from 32 states took part in this event held in conjunction with the Naitonal Junior Angus Show.

The top five finalists alone represented the states of Nebraska, California, Oregon, Louisiana and Pennsylvania.

Named the top showman of the contest was 18-year-old Tim Fitzgerald of Harrison, Nebr. Placing second through fourth were youths from California, Oregon and Louisiana, respectively.

Townsend gets Simmental award

Richard Townsend (left) of Brodbecks was one of nine junior members of the American Simmental Association to recently be named a recipient of the ASA's Merit Award. Townsend receives congratulations from ASA chairman of the Board Dr. Hugh Karsteter as he receives the association's Silver Merit Award. The award includes a $250 scholarship for post-secondary education.

Established five years ago by the ASA trustees, the Merit Award is designed to provide recognition to junior members who have made significant contributions to the Simmental breed through their involvement in Simmental and other livestock activities.

Although Townsend resides in Pennsylvania, he is a member of the Maryland Junior Association and has served as treasurer and area representative. An eight-year veteran of the 4-H program, Townsend was a member of the state's Champion Meats Judging team.

Managing hogs for larger litters

BY RICHARD BARCZEWSKI
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — Methods for increasing swine litter size get a lot of attention at research institutions around the country. The cost of producing a litter of pigs remains essentially the same regardless of the average number in the litter. Gestation and lactation feed costs also remain fairly constant, making it more profitable to farrow large litters.

Litter size is a function of ovulation rate, fertilization rate and intrauterine mortality rate. Research has shown that increasing the ovulation rate beyond the normal limits of 10 to 24 eggs shed is not advantageous due to large variations in litter sizes and in the birth weights in litters with articifially stimulated ovulations. Attempts have been made to increase litter size with hormones. However, these have been unsuccessful--probably becaue there's not enough room in the uterus for the extra fetuses.

Fertilization rates can be increased by using two boars on each sow bred. Research findings indicate a five to 10 percent increase in litter size with this practice when compared to sows bred twice by the same boar.

Only one-half to two-thirds of the embryos present at conception can be expected to survive to farrowing. Intrauterine deaths are the result of limitations imposed by the uterus, including the length of uterine horns and the spacing of embryos along them. On most farms six percent of the pigs farrowed are stillborn. Many of these piglets can be revived if someone is present to assist them at birth.

Environmental temperature extremes during early gestation and other stresses can lead to reduced litter size. Temperatures above 90 degrees F also affect boar fertility by reducing the number of live, motile sperm available to fertilize eggs ovulated by the sow. Reduced fertility and litter size usually occur four to six weeks following heat stress, since developing sperm cells—not those already fully developed—are the ones affected.

Social stress can also affect litter size. Keep sows in groups of 15 or less, since larger groups are prone to increased fighting.

Crossbreeding is another way to farrow more pigs, even though the heritability of litter size is low. Heterosis for litter size (depending on the breeds used in the cross) can range from five to 25 percent. In terms of live pigs born, crossbreeding will net you .2 extra pigs per litter.

Sow age is another factor. Generally, the number of pigs farrowed increases between the first and fourth litter. By the eighth, the number of live pigs born decreases, while the number of stillborn rises.

The effects of nutrition on litter size have been studied extensively. Feeding sows less than the normal maintenance levels of energy may reduce the ovulation rate. However, during gestation, variations in energy and protein have little effect on the number of pigs born, except that feeding gilts high energy in early gestation results in increased embryonic death.

To summarize:

- Set goals for the number of live pigs born per litter. A realistic goal for sows is 11 to 12 pigs; 9 to 10 is more realistic for gilts.
- Keep the ovulation rate as high as you can through natural means, such as adequate nutrition and reduced stress.
- Keep boars cool when temperatures approach 90 degrees F by providing shade, sprinklers or evaporative cooling.
- Commercial producers should crossbreed for an additional .2 pigs per litter due to heterosis.
- Feed balanced rations adequate in vitamins, minerals and energy, but avoid overfeeding.
- Avoid excess stress in the sow herd by keeping groups small, cool and healthy.

Diagnosing Hog Feed Efficiency

A science that's as infinite as feed efficiency is a tough one to get a handle on when it gets down to measuring and improving it on the farm. Here's how to start.

Whole-herd feed efficiency can be as simple as total pounds of feed fed over a given time, divided by the total pounds of hog sold over the same time. But, the more specific you can make it–feed cost per hundred of pork, feed costs per sow per year, pounds of grain and supplement per pound of pork, etc.–the easier it is to spot problem areas.

Buy a scale. Remember there are two sides to the feed efficiency equation, and a set of scales to weigh pens of hogs is a good investment in diagnosing feed efficiency and performance problems.

Factors that can affect feed efficiency from farm to farm include breed, sex, genetic makeup, health, feed quality, environment, feed additives and feed contaminants. A good ration-evaluation program, either one that's done yourself or one done for you by one of the many commercial least-cost ration formulation services or feed companies, should include as many of those factors in the formula as possible.

Be careful of mixing and delivery. If you're going to mix feed yourself, know the equipment and keep it calibrated, know the nutritional makeup of the ingredients, and don't be shy about spot-checking feed periodically with a commercial lab test.

A mill that measures feed ingredients by volume should be calibrated monthly and every time you start a new batch of ingredients. Nutrient concentration, density and moisture level will all affect the accuracy of a volumetric mill. Where it's practical, measure on a weight basis.

Ky Colonel is 'Show Sire of the Year'

PLATTE CITY, Mo. – Walco Ky Colonel, a winner in his own right in the show ring, has gone on to sire progeny that also go home with championship awards. Those offspring earned him the title of 1985 Chianina Show Sire of the Year, according to Bob Vantrease, president of the American-Chianina Association.

Lombard sired the three-quarters Chianina bull who is out of Walco Miss Faletto 4274 and is owned by Walco Farm of Stanford, Ky., and Kohler Farms of Kohler, Wis.

Colonel accumulated an impressive show record of his own during his show career and ended his two-year campaign undefeated in the black division.

Selection for Show Sire of the Year is based on the total number of points accumulated by each bull's progeny from May 1 to April 30 of each year. The points are determined by a progeny's placings at specific shows and each bull owner may enter up to five offspring that compete at any five of the specified shows.

China accepts first shipment of U.S. swine

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The People's Republic of China has accepted the first shipment of breeding swine received from the United States under a 1984 livestock export agreement between the two nations, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture official.

The shipment of 209 swine from Kansas was recently released from quarantine in Shenzen, China, where the animals have been held since arrival pending certification of their health.

"This shipment opens a new market to American farmers for their high-quality breeding swine, while helping the Chinese improve their meat production," said Bert W. Hawkins, administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

Hawkins said the Chinese required the swine to be quarantined in the United States before shipment and to undergo rigid testing and shipping procedures.

"The swine were tested for disease before being isolated for 30 days and tested a second time prior to shipment," Hawkins said. "The animals then were flown to China where they were placed in quarantine another 45 days and retested to assure that they had remained healthy and could be released safely into the Chinese livestock population."

The animals were tested for swine dysentery, brucellosis, atrophic rhinitis, parvovirus, tuberculosis, mycroplasma pneumonia, transmissible gastroenteritis and pseudorabies.

Hawkins said the 1984 livestock export agreement between the United States and China, worked out by agricultural officials from both countries, will enhance livestock export markets for Americans while upgrading Chinese herds to help provide their people with more protein in their diet.

"The agreement reached with the Chinese last year also opened markets for exporting American cattle and poultry," said Hawkins. "About 1200 cattle and 11,000 day-old chicks have been shipped from the United States to China in the past 12 months."

Vaccine may prevent holes in cattle hides

WASHINGTON, D.C. – An insect parasite that makes holes in skins of young cattle is the target of research to create a vaccine that could save consumers and the cattle industry $600 million a year, a U.S. Department of Agriculture scientist said today.

John H. Pruett, a microbiologist with USDA's Agricultural Research Service, said a crude vaccine made from the parasite, the cattle grub, has protected young cattle from the pest. The holes, which the grub forms so it can breathe, knock down the price of hides sold for leather.

Tests of the experimental vaccine showed young cattle had the same level of resistance that older cattle get naturally from being exposed to the grubs, said Pruett. He is doing the research at the U.S. Livestock Insects Laboratory, Kerrville, Tex.

Cattle grubs–also called back grubs or warbles–are the larvae of a fly (Hypoderma lineatum) that is about the size of a honeybee. The fly goes by several names, including heel fly or bomb fly.

Females fasten whitish eggs to the hairs on cattles' legs and lower parts of the body. When the eggs hatch in three to five days, the larvae crawl up the hairs and penetrate the hide.

Over several months, the larvae migrate until they arrive just beneath the skin of the animal's back. There, the larvae secrete an enzyme that aids them in forming breathing holes in the skin.

Wye Field Day scheduled Aug. 22

COLLEGE PARK – After a year's hiatus, the University of Maryland's Wye Field Day is scheduled for Thursday, August 22, at the university's Wye Research and Education Center near Queenstown. The day-long event was cancelled last year during the height of the avian influenza epidemic.

This year's field day retains many of those activities that have been popular with the traditional farm audiences. But it will also include activities to appeal to a broader base of Maryland's agricultural community, according to Dr. Russell Brinsfield, head of the Wye Research and Education Center.

"We still have the tours of recent research in field crops, vegetables, fruits, the Wye Angus herd, and forestry," Brinsfield said. "But we've also added an excellent program for rural homeowners to show them how they can play a key role in cleaning up the Chesapeake Bay."

Planners of the field day have also scheduled poster sessions, equipment demonstrations in the field, machinery exhibits, and bus tours of the university and Aspen facilities.

The field day is free and open to the general public. A buffet luncheon is available for $3; an early evening crab feast costs $7 and musical entertainment is scheduled.

Chianina Field Day announced

EAST BERLIN – Northeast Region American Chianina Association president, Carl E. Brothers, has announced that the association will be sponsoring its 1985 Northeast Region Junior Field Day in conjunction with the York Interstate Fair. The Field Day is scheduled for Sept. 8, with the heifer show to begin at 3:30 p.m. and the steer show to be held at 4:30 p.m. Dr. William Henning from Penn State University will judge this year's Field Day.

Exhibitors will show heifers in two divisions: black and white/other. Exhibitors of division heifer champions and steer show champions will receive premiums. Class premiums will also be awarded in both the heifer and steer shows.

An entry fee of $10 per head is being charged for all animals entered, and the entries must be sent to Mrs. Marjorie Brothers, Lake View Farm, R.D. #1, East Berlin, PA 17316. Entry deadline is August 14, 1985.

AHA establishes Braford registry

KANSAS CITY, Mo. – The American Hereford Association has announced the formation of a registry for Braford cattle. Established as a division of AHA, this new activity will be known as the American Braford Registry.

The registry will record full-blood Brafords which are comprised of 5/8 Hereford and 3/8 Brahman. Intermediate crosses necessary to reach full-blood status will also be recorded and includes first crosses composed of registered Hereford and registered Brahman parents, 3/4 Hereford and 1/4 Brahman crosses, as well as 3/4 Brahman and 1/4 Hereford crosses. In each intermediate cross, th use of registered Herefords and registered Brahman cattle is required.

"The AHA Board of Directors voted to initiate this project following several months of study and discussion with breeders of Hereford cattle and producers of Brahman-Heretord crosses," said Tom Shaw, president of the American Hereford Association. The possibility of establishing a Braford registry was brought to the Board's attention by producers throughout the southern tier of the U.S. who expressed a stong desire for AHA involvement.

The American Braford Registry will be a division of AHA directed by AHA staff and governed by the AHA Board. The genetic basis of Brafords recorded in this registry will require the use of registered Herefords which are recorded through the American Brahman Breeders Association.

It is anticipated that applications for registry will begin by September 1, 1985. Information concerning documentation and registry requirements for the intermediate crosses is presently available from the American Hereford Association, Box 4059, Kansas City, Mo. 64101, telephone 816/842-3757.

New feed store opens in Warriors Mark

WARRIORS MARK — Brian Parsons, a 10-year veteran of the feed business in central Pennsylvania, is opening a full-line Purina feed dealership in this Huntingdon County community.

Located at the center of town at the intersection of Routes 350 and 550, the facility is 20 miles southwest of State College.

The facility features a 1,500-square-foot showroom and a 22,000-square-foot warehouse.

In addition to the Purina products, Parsons will offer his own line of dairy feeds, and provide bag and bulk delivery and forage testing.

He promises a four-day turnaround in wet chemistry forage testing and computer analysis of dairy, beef, hog and poultry feeding programs.

Emphasizing a strong orientation to customer service, Parsons noted that the store will be open Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays until 8 p.m., to better serve customers who have more time to shop during evening hours.

"Service will be the key to increasing our business," Parsons added.

A grand opening celebration will be held Friday, Aug. 2.

Brian Parsons, left, and his two employees, Sandy and Brad Smith, in front of the new Warriors Mark Feed Center in Warriors Mark, 20 miles southwest of State College.

Get a head start with fall-seed cereals

NEW HOLLAND — Dairymen can't top the combination of a spring harvested cereal crop with full season crop for silage, says Joe Weicksel of Sperry New Holland. Seeding wheat, rye or barley this fall will provide a head start for 1986.

The cereral-corn combination gives you more feed per acre than any other, he adds. Where winter wheat, barley or rye can be sown in the fall after corn silage harvest, it will usually be ready to harvest as silage by corn planting time the next spring. It's a nine-ton head start on the year's feed supply that's easy to take.

Experience shows any of these cereal crops offer high feed value if taken off early, according to Weicksel who is product manager for Haybine· mower-conditioners at New Holland. The critical point is to harvest just as the heads are emerging from the "boot". If you wait for a later stage to get more tons per acre, the quality will fall away rapidly.

Later harvest results in feed of lower protein and digestibility. It slows down in the cow's digestion system. Less is consumed and milk production will suffer. What we usually think of as palatability from the cow's viewpoint is really just a measure of digestibility, notes Weicksel. If the crop goes through the cow's system faster, she will eat more because she's empty. Flavor probably isn't the main point as much as the digestibility of the forage.

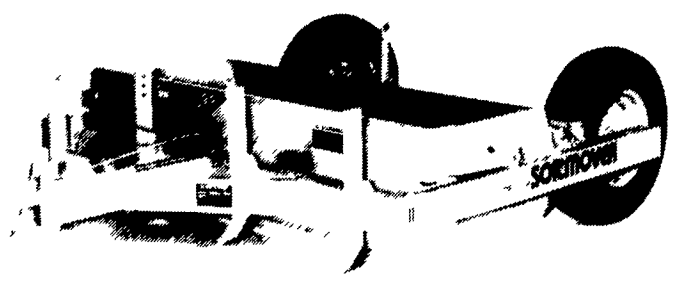
Rye, for example, has a poor reputation as a forage because it is often harvested too late for best quality. But University of Delaware dairy experience shows wheat, rye and barley are about equal in feed value if they're harvested early. The stage where the heads are just emerging is "the last call for quality" for all of these crops. Harvesting earlier frees the land earlier for corn planting. With reduced tillage or no-till corn planting, little growing season time is wasted and cover crop removal helps reduce planting problems.

Spring-harvested wheat, barley or rye is handy to have for summer feed when pastures slow down. Very digestible, lower fiber forage is especially desirable then because it's easier on the cow's digestion during the time of peak heat stress.

Wilting is advised before chopping because the moisture content is too high for best fermentation. The amount of wilting may depend on how you plan to store the feed, says Weicksel. University of Delaware experience seems to show 60% to 70% moisture is satisfactory for storage in Ag Bag plastic tubes. A lower moisture content is probably advisable for tower silos because juice run off problems could result from the higher pressures in a tower silo if the forage is too wet.

Two-stage harvest with windrowing ahead of the forage harvester actually speeds up the harvest, says Weicksel. In addition to wilting the crop for better fermentation, the windrowed crop feeds into a forage harvester with a·windrow pickup faster and easier than with a direct cut attachment. Depending on the yield, a wider cut can be funneled into a single windrow to increase the acres handled per hour.

'Little Scratch' scraper



The Soilmover "Little Scratch" carry-all scraper performs small land-tailoring jobs easier, better and more efficiently than rear blades or front-end loaders, the manufacturer said. Available in 1 or 1½ cubic yard models, it can be operated with as little as 20 horsepower and requires no expensive hydraulics. "Little Scratch" requires 3-point lift or similar control for the drawbar to lower scraper into loading position and raise it for carry position. Pull trip lever and it rolls over to unload...spreading action is controlled by drawbar lift. Simple roll-over design makes "Little Scratch" the ideal tool for simple landscaping, small excavation and maintenance work.

Maryland SCS calls for name change

EASTON, Md. — The Chesapeake Bay cleanup was the focal point of discussion at the Maryland Association of Soil Conservation Districts' summer meeting July 17 to 19 in Easton, Md.

Association members departed from a nearly 50-year tradition and voted to ask the state legislature to add the word "water" to the name of the state's 24 local soil conservation districts.

District supervisors felt the name soil and water conservation district would better reflect their organizations' role in conserving and protecting the state's water supplies, especially because of their expanded role in the Bay cleanup.

They also went on record calling for full funding under the state's agricultural cost-share program for farmers who install poultry waste storage structures. The large concentration of poultry wastes, and their improper storage and application, poses a threat to both ground and surface waters, they said. The Maryland Dept. of Agriculture, which administers the cost-share program, makes the final determination of the type and number of best management practices that receive funds.

Sharon Fenton, cost-share program administrator, announced that the initial $5 million appropriated for the program has been committed. An additional $2 million approved by the legislature may not become available until next February, after the state's next bond issue. The new money will be targeted to priority areas where the potential for pollution is greatest, she added.

Trojan unveils gas heater for livestock tank water

CONRAD, IA. – Trojan Specialized Livestock Equipment introduces a new gas livestock tank water heater, the 66B. It runs on LP or natural gas. The heavy steel unit stands 35" tall with an 8½" diameter and weighs 49 lbs. Designed with the user in mind, it can be fitted to most steel, wood or concrete tanks.

The burner's heater can be easily removed, lighted and reinserted into the one piece welded steel casing. The unit's special cover is designed to keep the burner lighted on windy days. The unit's thermostat sensing bulb is conveniently located in a water-tight tube alongside the heater. This prevents the sensing bulb from being frozen in place. The control, thermostat and burner can be easily removed for servicing.

The unit is easy to install. It is designed to prevent water overflows from reaching the burner. And, warm air around the control valve helps prevent freeeze-ups and sticky valves. The unit has been field tested and proven during winters in the U.S. and Canada.

The tank heater's automatic pilot control is approved by the American Gas Association and the unit has been approved by the Canadian Standards Association.

Bush Hog ATV Spreader

SELMA, AL – Bush Hog's new gear-driven spreader can be used anywhere a three or four-wheel all terrain vehicle can go, according to Bob Weaver, Bush Hog sales representative.

"The ATV spreader allows homeowners and farmers to fertilize lawns and pastures without tearing up the turf, even under wet conditions." said Weaver. "It can also be used as a seeder to plant food plots for wildlife in areas that are innaccesible to tractors."

The spreader holds 75 pounds (or one bushel) of fertilizer or seed and a convenient handle allows the user to regulate the distribution rate. The spreader's rotating agitator breaks up clods to assure an even flow through the hopper. The wide-stance wheelbase provides stability, even at high towing speeds.

FARMI introduces new grain moisture tester

ST. PAUL, MN – A grain moisture tester so tough it can withstand being run over by a tractor has been introduced by FARMI Electronics Corporation.

The FARMI 3000 Grain Moisture Tester features instant "ON" and automatic "OFF" controls and requires no initial calibration.

To practice a moisture reading, the operator simply fills the grain chamber with a handful of grain, screws on the cap, pushes the "test" button and reads the moisture percentage through the large display window. The unit provides automatic temperature compensation regardless of grain temperature.

In addition to the corn, wheat and soybeans shown in the display window, the Model 3000 provides readouts for up to 14 different grains and seeds, plus hay (with hay probe attachment).

A fine-calibration screw permits the operator to change the calibration ±1% to agree more closely with the local elevator.

In addition to a two-year warranty on parts and workmanship - including damage from dropping - the company provides 10-year free calibration service.

FARMI moisture testers are widely used by grain farmers, grain handlers and, since 1981, by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA).

FARMI moisture testers are distributed throughout the U.S. by grain elevator, farm supply and farm equipment dealers.

The Single Cable Volumaster-Butler's new silo unloader

FORT ATKINSON, WI. — Like the popular three-cable Volumaster™, Butler Livestock Systems' new Single Cable Volumaster silo unloader is designed for high capacity, low maintenance and easy servicing. The major difference is that it can be installed under an existing tripod.

A new feature on the Single Cable Volumaster is a torque arm made of a 2-inch square steel tubing with polyethelene support pads and rollers that allow it to "telescope," a design that helps prevent sticking and binding.

Converting the unloader to the raise position is a five-minute, one-man job. By lowering the machine to the silage surface, repositioning the three cables on the raising bolts, and realigning the torque arm and discharge chute, the unloader is made ready for hoisting. It can then be raised to the top of the tripod for silo filling.

A standard feature on the new Volumaster is a 950 R.P.M. impeller with an adjustable shear plate. This feature reduces carry-by and minimizes wear in the impeller housing. A deep-sided fiberglass discharge chute channels air from the impeller, for increased throwing power.

All the components of the Volumaster are designed for minimum maintenance, and those that do require routing servicing are easy-to-get-at.

Butler invented the ring drive unloader and has refined it with numerous design innovations. For more information on the new Single Cable unloader, contact your local Butler dealer or write to Butler Livestock Systems, 801 Janesville Avenue, Fort Atkinson, WI 53538. Telephone: (414) 563-5521.

This versatile model roars along with tractors as high as 150 hp and purrs along with tractors as low as 60 hp (Gehl has two other models the 1260 for tractors up to 300 hp and the 1060 with a new horsepower rating for maximum 200 hp)

Rugged construction

At Gehl durability is a must And you can see it in the 21" wide cylinder of the 760 Eight tungsten carbide faced knives mounted on a hefty almost three inch shaft help give the 760 a reputation for ruggedness

Economical design

The 760 features a close coupled cylinder and blower with part of the cylinder knives actually running in the blower compartment Result increased efficiency by the elimination of dead spots in material flow through the unit

Simplified maintenance

The 760 can be fitted with an in head hydraulic knife sharpener that allows the cylinder knives to be sharpened right in the field using tractor hydraulics The knife sharpener system can also be used to reface the cutterbar for better cutting and reduced horse power requirements And you save valuable time with features like the simplified single station cutterbar adjustment system which lets you reset the cutter bar from one point on the harvester with a single wrench

And much more

A new option for the 760 is an overrunning clutch on the drive line which allows the cylinder and blower to free wheel when power is cut Another option bevel extenders which bolt onto the cylinder knives to give a longer cutting bevel improving uniformity of cut in dry corn silage without power consuming screens Row attachments for the 760 include the one row and wide or narrow two row

The satisfaction that comes from doing a good job of farming

Liming is one of the most important factors in keeping your soil in the highest productive range A good pasture with a pH of 6 5 or higher, for example will make 300 to 400 lbs of beef per acre and produce up to $100 gross income per acre This means with the help of lime, profits from pastures can compare favorably with feed or grain crops

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Success must be earned

Sometimes people who are in financial trouble say they would like to improve their lot in life. However they then say through their actions that any change they will make will only be on their terms and only the change that they want to make.

A Sunday School lesson recently struck a responsive note on this very topic in relation to repentence from SIN. The change for many people is like saying you are sorry but not really meaning it. As I prepared the lesson, I thought how this paralleled the thing that farmers often do when they face a problem.

In effect they say "I need help, but only if it takes no effort or sacrifice on my part". The solution to genuine repentance is practically the same as the one to making a change in the management structure of a farm business.

First, you have to acknowledge that you have done something wrong or made an error. It is often too easy to blame someone else or something else. We all do this just as we all say we are sorry when we really are not.

If you are really interested in improving your management, only you can do it. There are no short cuts and no magic potions and no easy way outs. If you want to make a success of your operation, you must earn it.

Second, you must recognize your responsibility. All of us would like to find reasons why things happen that are bad that would exonerate us, but we are each of us responsible for our own life. We are also responsible for our farm management decisions even when these decisions are to not make a decision.

It is hard to admit that we have choices to make and that we have sometimes made the wrong ones. It is easier to blame others or to moan about our fate. But if you are going to improve, you will have to start by saying "I am responsible" and mean it.

Third, you will have to become resolute and "tough it out" not by cutting yourself off from all help, but by asking for help then using it to help you make decisions. You will have to go to your banker and say I am having some temporary problems but I will solve them by a certain date. At that point you will have to be sincere and factual. If you can not document the changes and results of these changes, you will be categorized with those who say I'm sorry but do not mean it How can you blame the banker, have you delivered on any other promise you have made?

Fourth, a true test of the genuineness of your desire to improve is your effort to change your actions. If you act as though everything should go as usual, can you be viewed as truly being in earnest? The protests that you want a change become pretty hollow.

ASDIC's new 'Stock Marker'

ASDIC LTD. has introduced a New "Stock Marker" Spray available in red, green and blue. Stock Marker is an effective way to mark cattle, hogs, sheep and poultry. An oil base spray, it dries on contact, lasts two to three days and is fully scourable. Because it's a spray there is not a need to physically touch the animal to mark either skin or hair. Effective in hot or cold weather, each can provides hundreds of marks. In conjunction with Stock Marker ASDIC also markets "Boar Mate" - the "swine aphrodisiac" used to assist in estrus recognition of swine - both for natural and artificial service.

New 'Smart Feeder'

SCHILLER PARK, Il. – The new smart feeder from Supreme Farmstead Division of DeMuth Steel Products Co., allows you to tell is "smart" control unit how much of each feed type to feed each cow (up to three individual rations).

This innovation brings the benefits of controlled individual cow feeding of concentrate rations to stanchion barn operations.

You don't need to be a computer programmer to operate the smart feeder. Simple calculator-style keyboard with LED display is used to operate the "Smart" control unit.

The SMART FEEDER runs on a monorail suspended in the barn. It is battery-powered and automatically recharges itself.

Individual cow feeding benefits show up in–lower feed costs, higher milk production, reduced labor and, better herd health, the manufacturers says.

Aer Way™

THE BETTER WAY
TO REVITALIZE THE SOIL AND INCREASE YIELD

The AER-WAY is an utility implement that relieves compaction, aerates, cultivates and renovates. It can function as a rotary hoe, a disc, a roller and a harrow. It saves fuel, time and fertilizer. It increases water percolation, bacterial life and root growth. it is an implement for pastureland, grassland, horse paddocks, general field crops, vegetable production, orchards, vineyards and turfgrass. The AER-WAY will increase your profits through lower costs and higher yields.

JAN MARTUSEWICZ, Evans Mills, N Y
"I used the Aer-way on test strips in July 1983 The clover timothy stand was 2 years old at that time We increased the yield on 1st cutting in 1984 in Aer-way treated sections by 12 5% And, it appeared that we had more clover present on those areas of the field "

WHY NOT CULTIVATE ALFALFA?

It's Just Another Legume - Almost
Aeration of alfalfa is nothing more or less than cultivation It has always proven effective on annual legumes such as beans and peas Research is proving that cultivating alfalfa is highly effective too The difference is that alfalfa is a perennial, aeration of alfalfa requires more management in order to maximize the benefits

Starting at the Beginning
Preparation of the soil of establishing alfalfa is vital to the success of the stand Removal of plow sole is essential if a deep tap root is to develop This is accomplished effectively in the late summer

The benefits of deep-tillage are easily removed by performing secondary tillage when soils are too wet Late summer seedlings can be exceptionally effective largely because soil moisture allows tillage with minimum compaction

The AerWay™ equipped with optional four tine roller loosens wet soils very effectively with little compaction The warm soil on the surface is smoothed and firmed

The extent to which the root zone is left uncompacted will largely determine the first year production and the eventual plant mortality Frost seedings in late winter are effective for much the same reason

Pressure-Treated Lumber

Wolmanized pressure-treated wood and Outdoor wood have built-in chemical protection that provides resistance to decay and termites. This material has been pressure-impregnated with Koppers Wolman® CCA wood preservative which meets or exceeds federal, state and industry specifications for this type of wood preservative. The chemicals are fixed in the wood and, although toxic to termites and fungi, they are not present in sufficient quantity to be toxic to animals.

Producers urged to VOTE

CHICAGO — Farmers and ranchers can help improve farm commodity markets if they see their local ag chemical dealer now.

By participating in Velsicol's Operation Trade Expansion, or "VOTE" program, a farmer or rancher can contribute to specific market development projects being conducted by six agricultural commodity groups.

"Farmers experiencing economic stress can help change the situation by supporting market development efforts," says Dale Miller, Vice President of the Agricultural Business Group at Velsicol Chemical Corporation. "By participating in the VOTE program, farmers help themselves by strengthening demand for farm commodities and thereby improving commodity prices," he says.

Under the terms of "VOTE", for every gallon of Velsicol herbicide purchased between October 1, 1984 and September 30, 1985, Velsicol donates 50 cents to either the American Soybean Association, Cotton Incorporated, National Association of Wheat Growers, National Cattlemen's Association, National Corn Growers Association or the National Pork Producers Council.

Farmers who have purchased either Banvel, Weedmaster or Carbyne herbicides since last October must obtain ballots at their ag chemical dealer and "VOTE" to donate funds to one of the six groups in order for the funds to be contributed. The money generated will be invested by the six commodity groups in programs which build markets for the U.S. ag products.

"As the herbicide spray season is winding down in many areas, farmers who purchased our products now need to be sure they voted," says Miller. "All they need to do is visit their local ag chemical dealer and fill out a ballot. The more ballots that are cast, the more money we can donate to the six participating commodity groups," he explains.

Last year, nearly a quarter of a million dollars was donated by Velsicol to the six participating groups to build markets for beef, pork, wheat, corn, cotton and real dairy foods. This year, soybeans have been added to the list of commodities for which farmers can "VOTE".

"Velsicol supports the efforts of all commodity groups who are involved in market development, at home and abroad, to ensure markets for their products. And that's one reason why we initiated Operation Trade Expansion in the fall of 1983," says Miller.

"We recognize that the future of our company, as well as other agribusinesses, is directly linked to the health of the farm economy," he says.

New Sweepster RHFA broom

The new RHFA rear three-point, nitch-mounted sweeper features a wide-angle, constant-velocity driveshaft. The new driveshaft allows the use of a single gearbox instead of a bulky, less efficient "double gearbox." In addition, the driveshaft incorporates a variety of power increasing features and functional improvements that insure angular flexibility and smooth transmission of the rotary movement. The six-foot wide sweeper is driven from the rear PTO and is raised and lowered with the three point arms. The new RHFA sweeper is available for tractors with over 25hp and equipped with category 1 and 2 hitches.

Heliotrope converter

SPRING VALLEY, CA — Heliotrope General announces the introduction of an Inverter for converting 12-volt battery power to 120 volt A.C. current. Designated WF-12-1200, the inverter is rated for continuous service at 1200 Watts. Surges and short time duty can exceed 4000 Watts dependent upon duration of time.

The Heliotrope General WF-12-1200 is a state-of-the-art solid state FET design which operates at a maximum conversion efficiency of 93%. The unit is able to operate loads as low as 1/100 Watt. Start-up time is immediate with stand-by power consumption of less that ½ Watt.

Another feature of the WF-12-1200 is the ability to charge a battery from the utility when utility power is available. Charging rates are selectable for 10, 25, or 50 Amps.

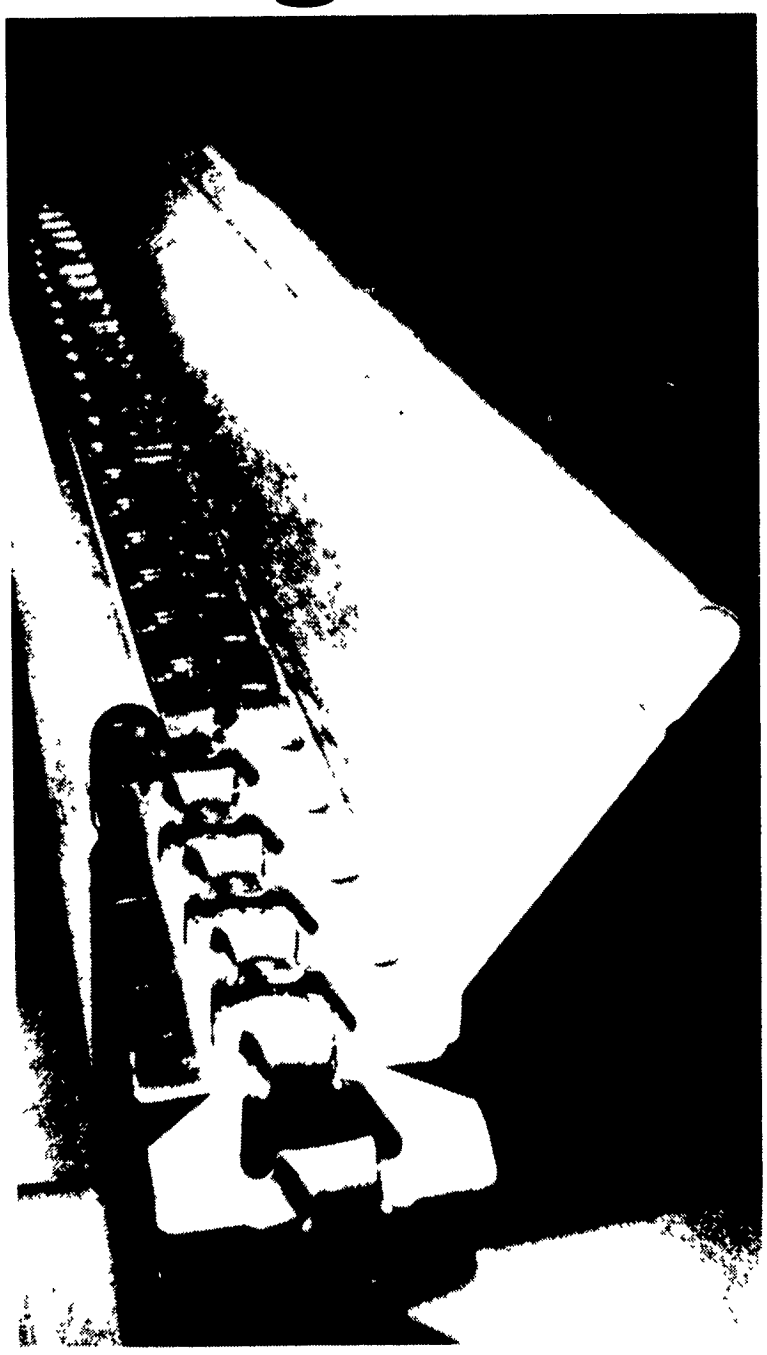
A Cage isn't enough



It takes more than wire to make a cage system More than anything else it takes a feeder

Sure, other components are important, but mainly it's the feeder that makes the system That's why Big Dutchman's Systems are equipped with a SPEED FEED chain feeder that feeds every bird the right amount at the right time, without waste

When you compare poultry equipment remember that the real test of a cage system is its feeder Big Dutchman is ready for the test.

Don't let Summer burn up your profits!

Purina's new Egg Weight Plus™ brand LAYING FEEDS increases egg size and returns!

Now Purina's Egg Weight Plus adds to the Accu-Line Program another way to increase egg size. These new Accu-Line™ brand laying feeds can improve egg size from young layers, whenever hot weather depresses egg size below market demands or anytime the price spread is wide between Medium and Large eggs.

Producers that feed Accu-Line realize the value of increasing egg size. With Accu-Line, they've increased egg size to meet changing market conditions, while maximizing the number of marketable eggs. The result—improved profits!

Egg Weight Plus increases egg size above that achieved by the current Accu-Line program.

To increase your egg size with Accu-Line or Accu-Line Egg Weight Plus, see your Purina Dealer or District Manager today.

To us, your egg size matters.
